E Pluribus Unum: From many one.

These words found on United States coins are not only applicable to a nation—from many people one nation—but to Tucson High School—from many backgrounds one student body. Each student entered school bringing with him impressions, traditions and beliefs from his past. Individuals' change and growth was brought about through the exchanging of these experiences. Aside from personal philosophies and opinions, the more tangible background of culture played its role during the year. The student body was made up of students who spoke various languages, wore different styles of clothing, continued old customs and believed in a variety of religions. Interests, talents and classes, as well as culture, helped to determine which one of the many social groups the individual became a part of. Classes, required and elective, gave students the opportunity for finding friends with common interests. As the year progressed, these individuals and groups, with their diverse talents and abilities, merged to make THS a unique whole.

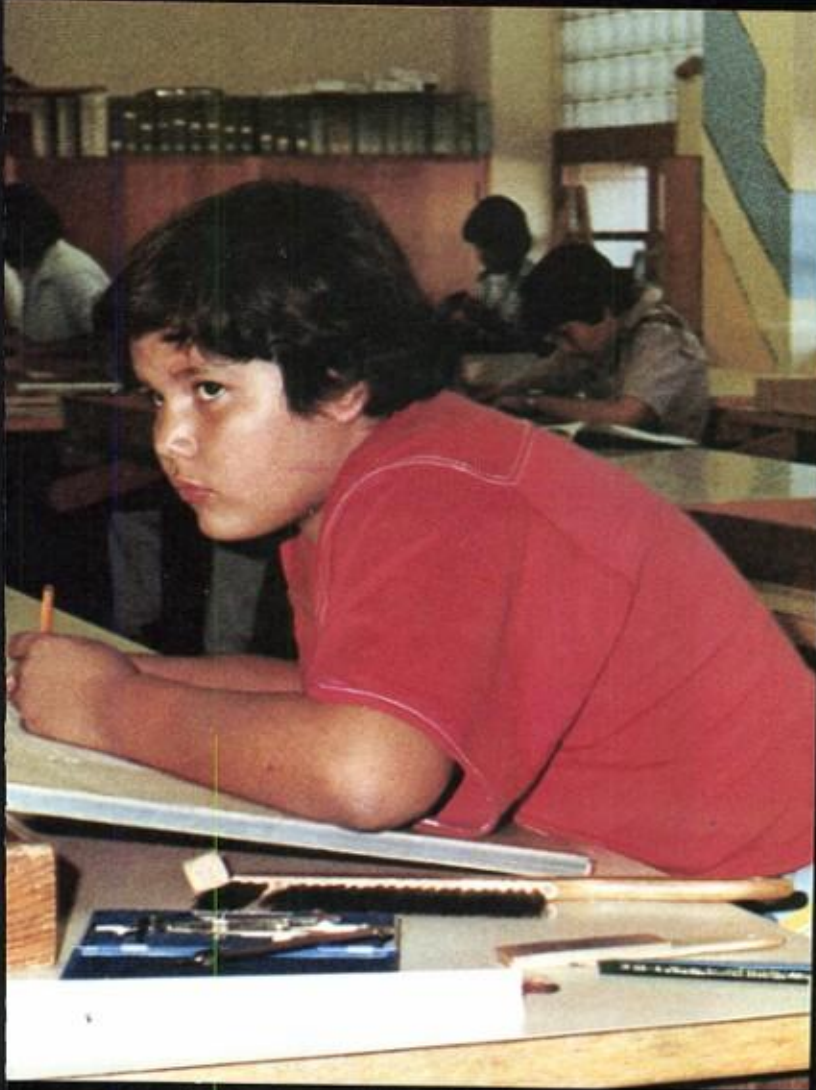

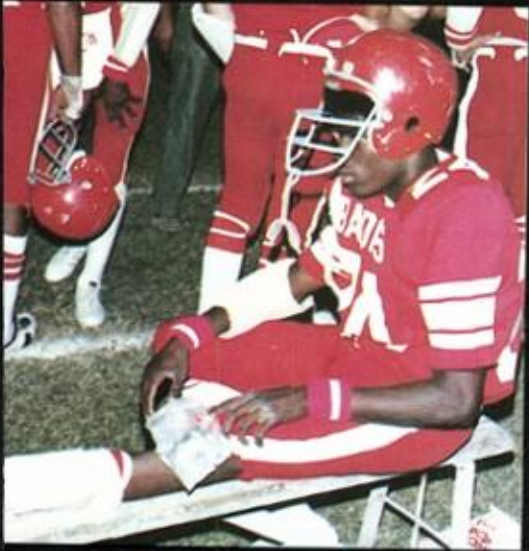

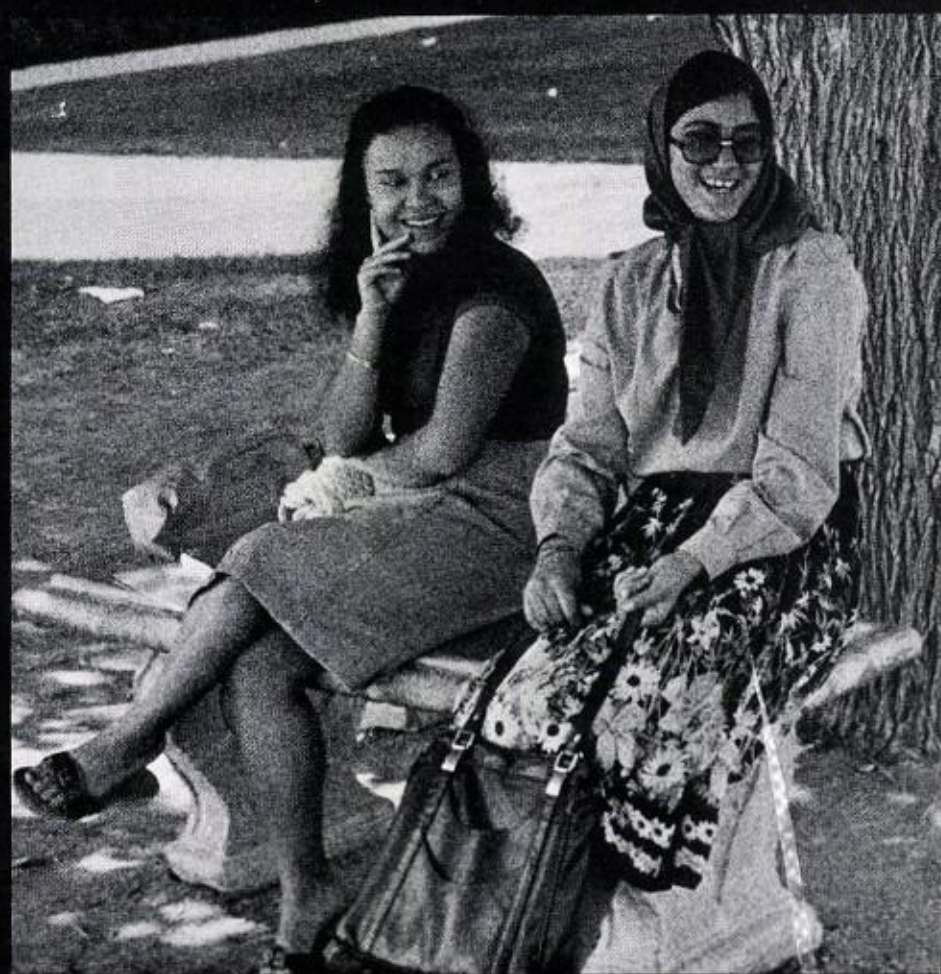

On-campus involvements were many and widespread. Numbered among these were clubs, athletics and groups such as drama and orchestra which allowed the individual to make use of his talents. Besides being involved in clubs for enjoyment, the student could join groups which offered him assistance in furthering his career plans. He used his in-school and after-school time to listen to speakers, take field trips or volunteer for bake sales and car washes to finance his group. Students who took part in a sport found it both a positive and negative activity. Considerations were: having a winning or losing season, training for competition and knowing and being able to work with fellow team members. Many students found that because of their abilities they were drawn away from old friends in new directions. Choir, speech and dance, together with drama and orchestra, opened up whole new areas for exploration. The student found the necessary encouragement and support among his peers to induce him to experiment. Although each student reacted differently to the same set of challenges they joined to form a unified student body.

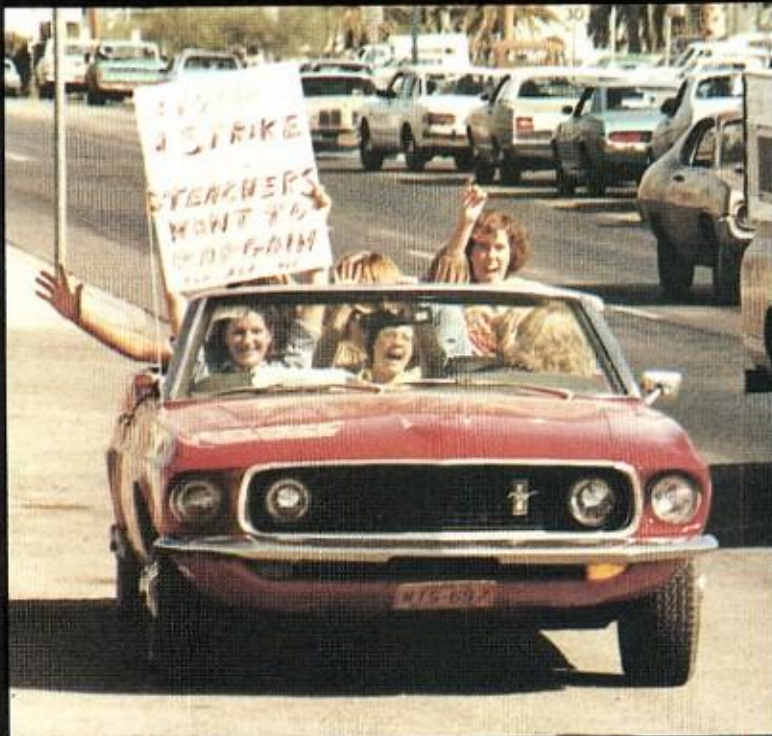

Students' participation, off-campus, ranged from picketing during the teacher's strike to getting involved in the year's elections. Many students who worked on campaigns were rewarded by having their candidates succeed. As in previous years many found that programs such as PIP and COE took up much of their after-school time. These jobs offered them experience in possible career choices. However, jobs were not restricted to placement through the school and included department store sales and fast-food work. Many students felt impelled to work whether it was to help out with family finances, to save for the future or to acquire spending money. In place of, or in addition to these involvements, others worked as volunteers in church groups and community organizations. But work was not the only way the student spent his time. He used it to pursue hobbies, attend dances, concerts and games or just to be with friends. By taking part in off-campus activities which either directly or indirectly related to Tucson High, individuals' ties to the school strengthened into one.

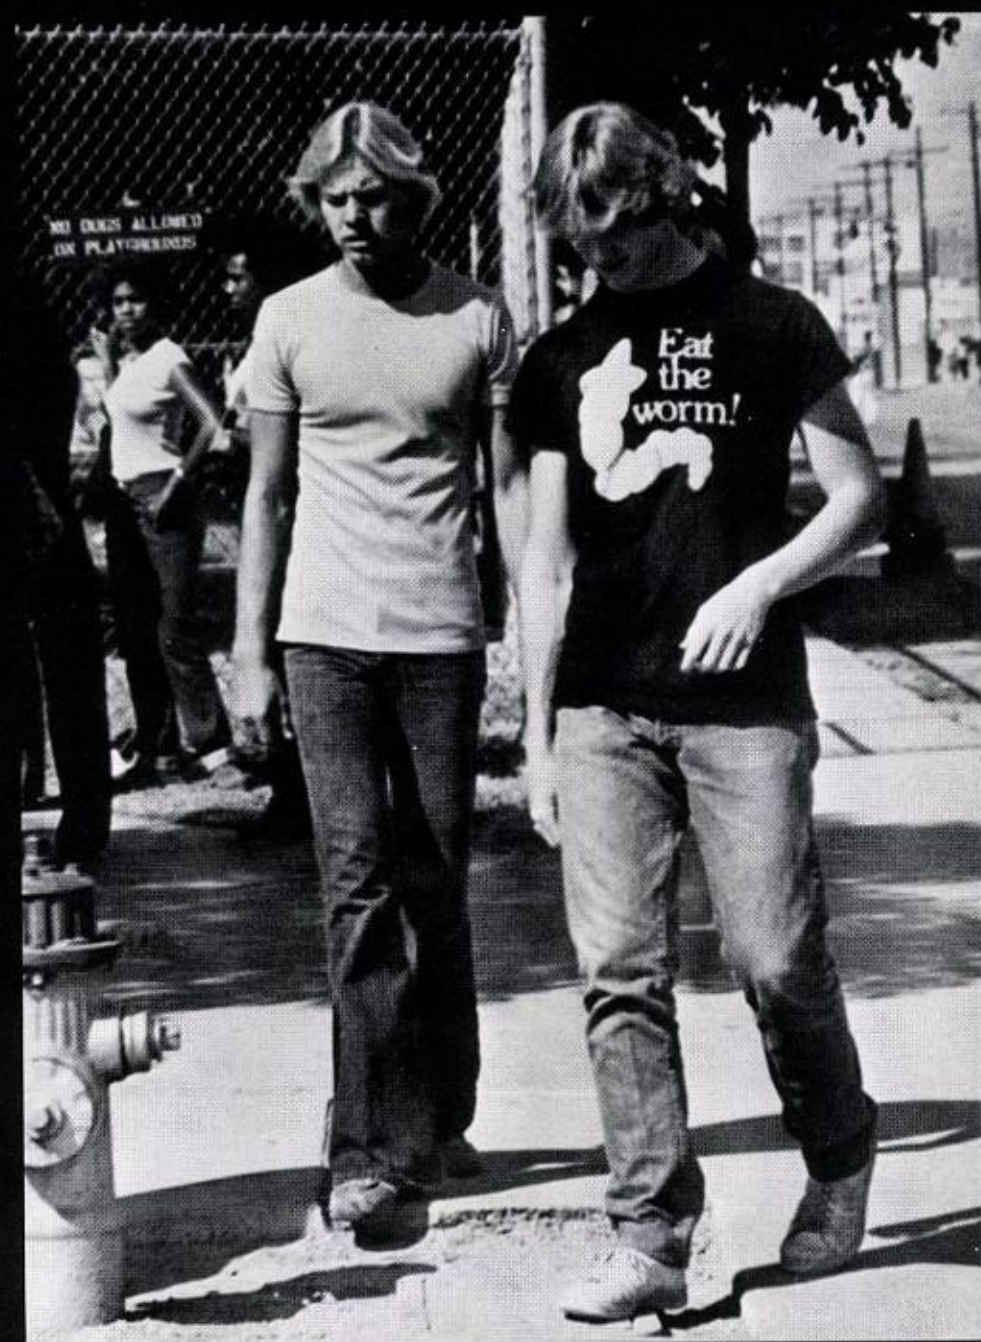

From many influences one personality.

The environment of THS could be compared to the melting pot concept. Most students realized that not only were they changing but that the entire student body was changing as it accepted or rejected new ideas brought in by individuals of different cultural and social groups. School activities, conference and passing periods and lunch provided the opportunity to put these ideas to use. Soon after his arrival to the campus he found himself being introduced to school traditions. Events such as the Friday night games, Spaghetti Dinner, Tidybowl, the preparation of the Christmas boxes and Spirit Week brought students together. Students were positively and negatively influenced through their contact with others. They had to learn to cope with people who lived and acted differently. To encompass this they became either more open-minded or more conservative. They accepted the negative aspects of racism and the conflict between the social classes as an unavoidable way of life. Through all this the individual was able to remain independent while he blended into the total personality of the school.

Student Life

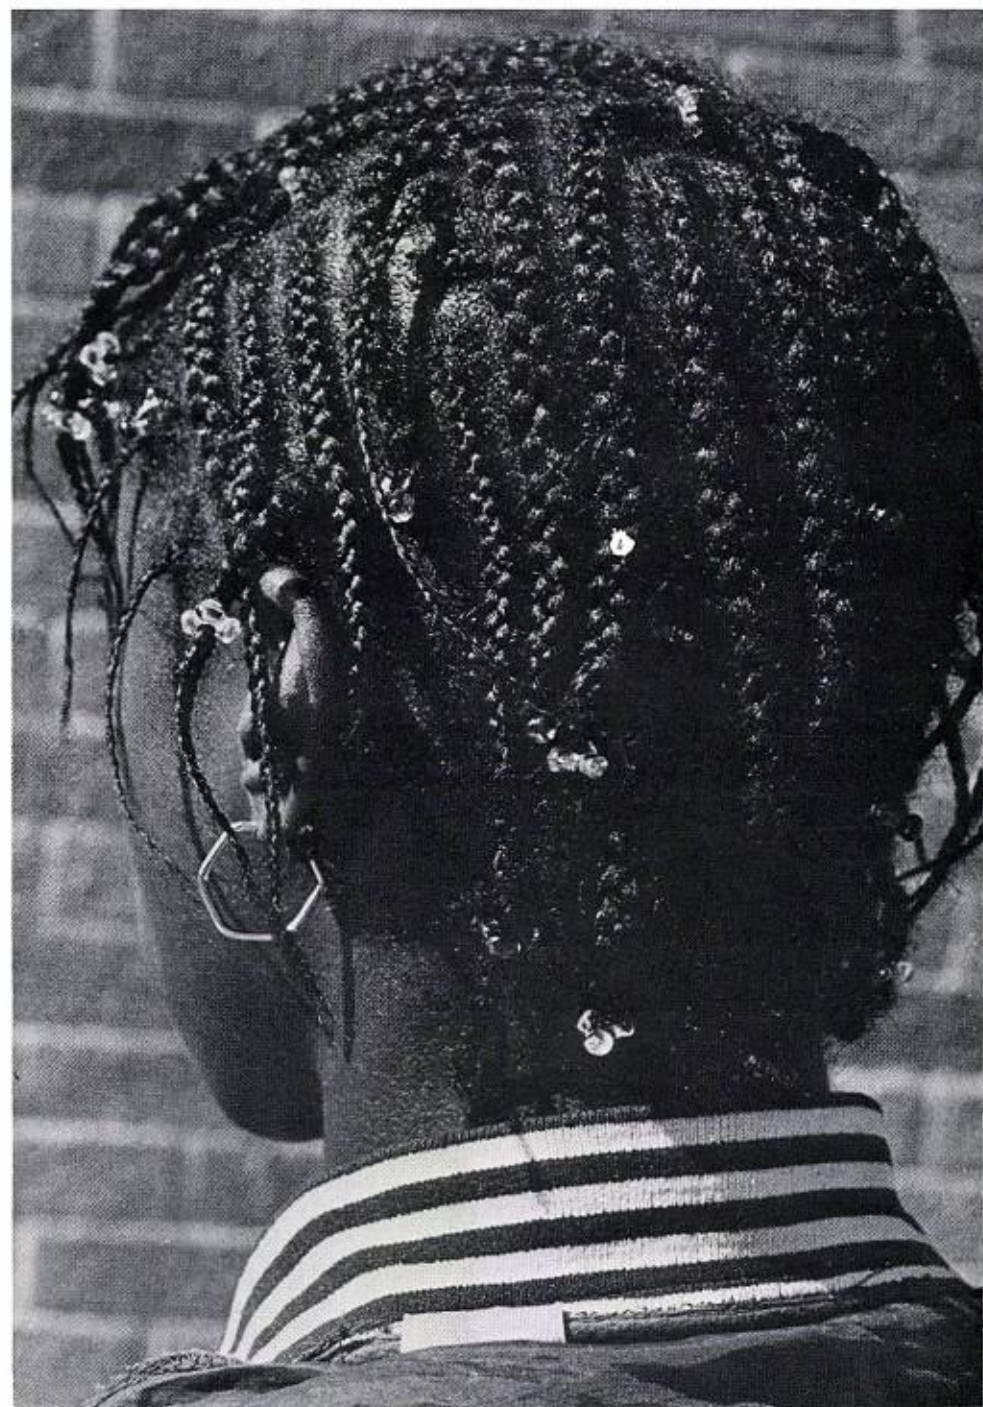

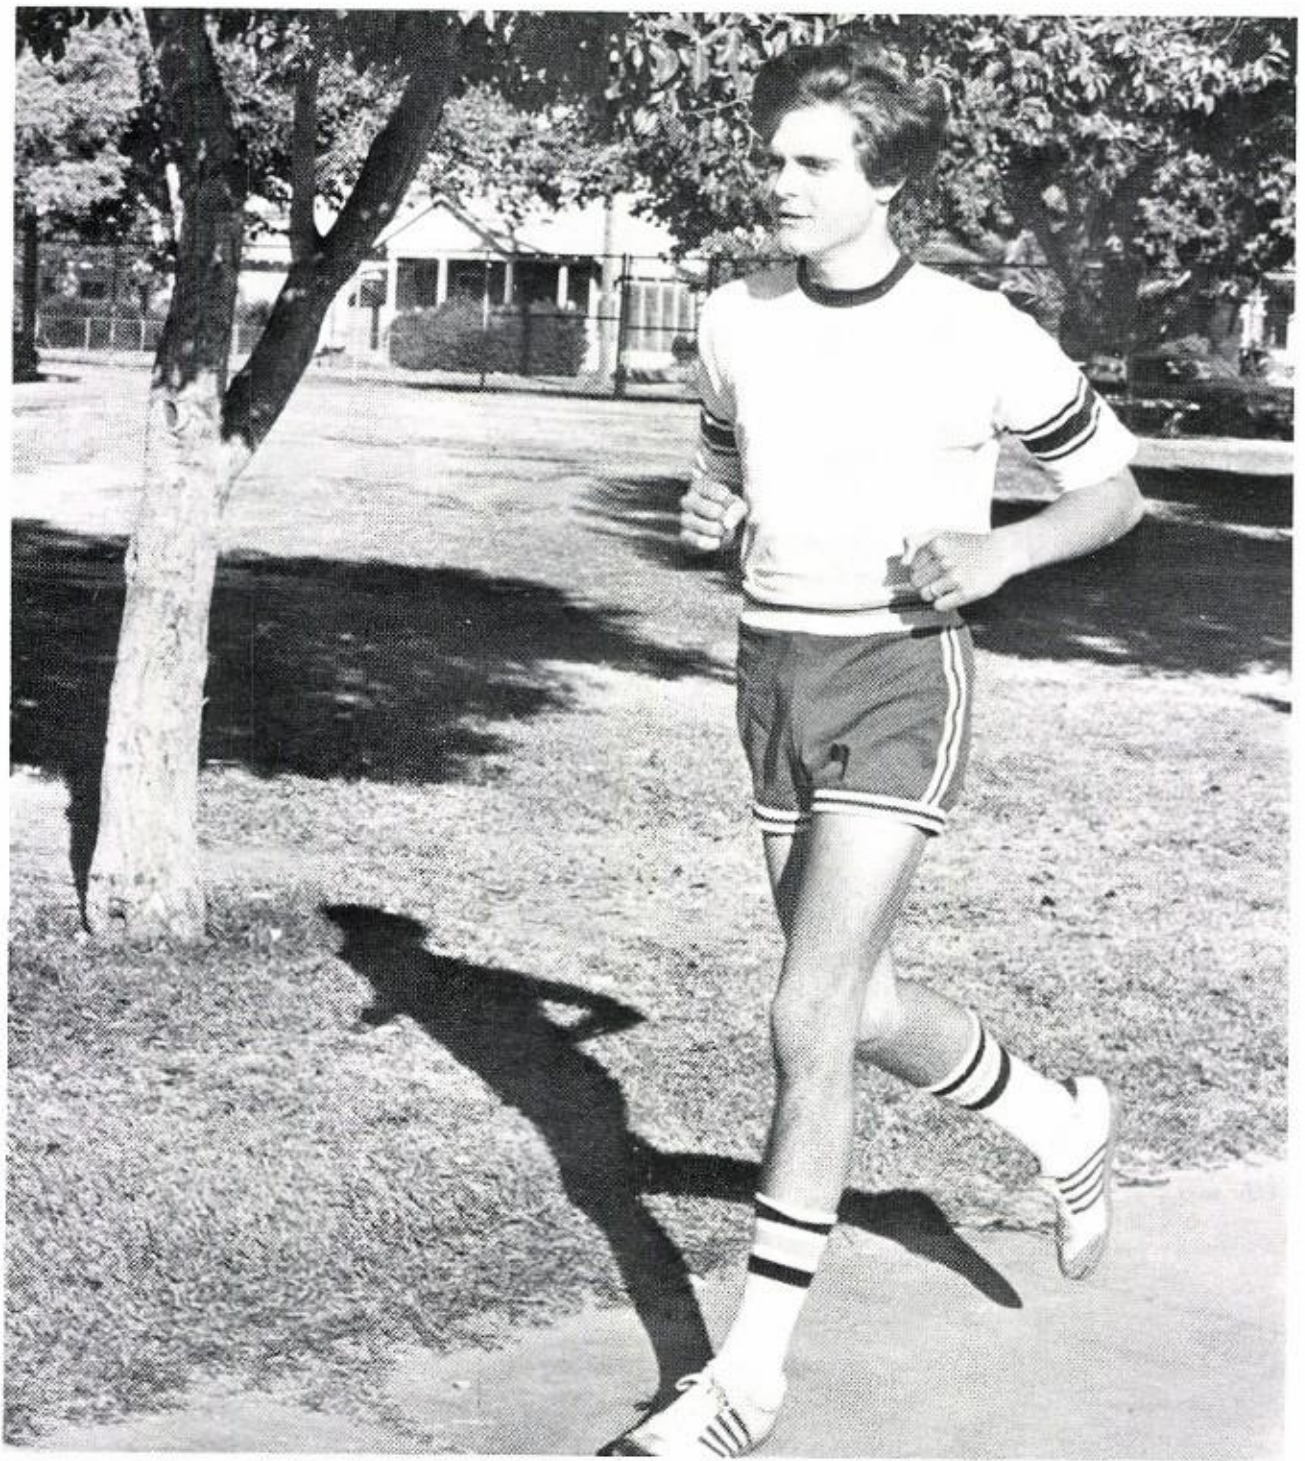

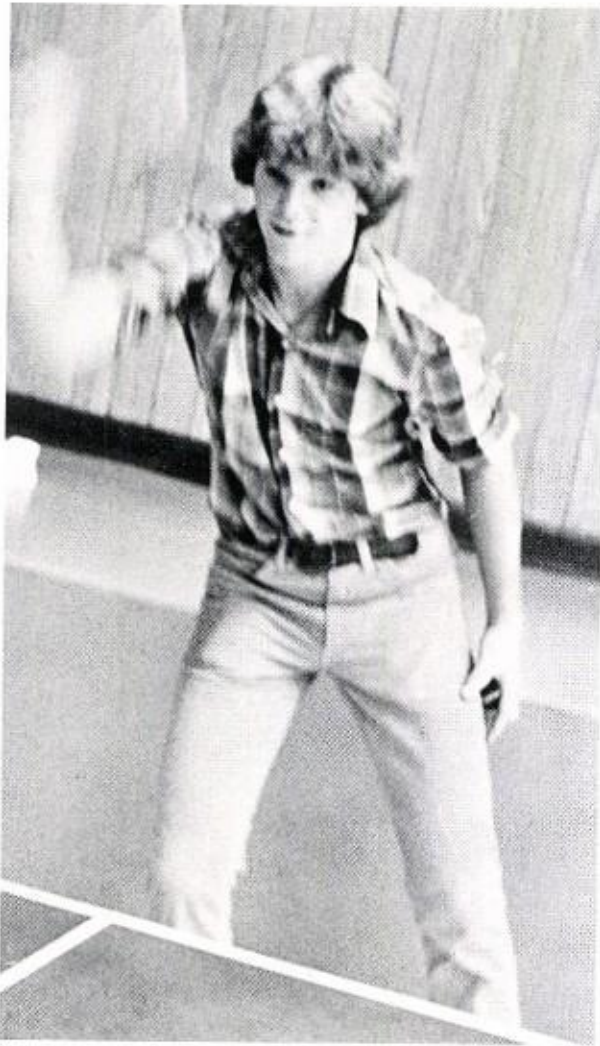

Trends

Games influenced the way students spent their leisure time.

Racquetball was the new sports craze. T.H.S. students could usually be found playing ping-pong at the UA Student Union. Many played backgammon during and after school. Both men and women wore T-shirts emblazed with phrases and logos. Boots and cowboy hats helped sport the western look this year. For women the Annie Hall look was in with loosely fitted blouses and skirts.

Moviegoers were attracted to cult movies this year with Animal House and the Rocky Horror Picture Show leading the way.

Appearing pleased with the roll of the dice, Robert Bartlett (lower left), was able to gammon his opponent.

New and different hairstyles were created by many girls (lower right) by using beads braided into their hair.

The early morning hours proved to be ideal for joggers (lower right) such as Patrick Porter.

Keeping his eyes on the ball, Clark Evenchik (lower right) smashed a cross court volley to win the match.

Spirit

Attempting to boost morale, the student council promoted several assemblies. Terpsi performed during the Homecoming festivities. Red and white badges were worn by many on Fridays before football games. The spirit raising slogans aided members of the faculty as well as students in displaying their enthusiasm. Students were able to exchange spirit by giving corsages, boutonnieres and Santa-Grams to each other. Red and white Day and Hat Day were some of the events included in Spirit Week, which ended traditionally with the hall decoration contest.

Noontime

A five minute extension to the lunch period gave students more time to eat and socialize with their friends. Many used the extra time to do last minute studying for their classes, while others ventured off campus to near-by delis and fast food restaurants. The UA game room and the Park Student Center offered a break in the everyday routine. Many played tennis, frisbee and football during noontime. With the help of the band, the student council held pep rallies to promote spirit.

The steps leading to the cafeteria (center left) proved to be a challenge for the more daring skateboarder.

By making periodical checks under the hood, Matt Wallace (right) was able to keep his truck in good condition.

Students' interests ranged from pursuing hobbies and crafts to training and working on jobs. Students played instruments in bands and ensembles as pastimes. Concerts at the Tucson Community Center's Arena and Music Hall highlighted the year for many. Crafts included making stained glass in private studios, drawing, painting and model building at home. Students' jobs varied widely. Training for positions such as assistant managers enabled a few to earn extra money and at the same time gain more responsibility. Others volunteered their time to do community service work and participated in political campaigns.

Homecoming

In the traditional manner, Homecoming was led off by Spirit Week. Using Disneyland as their theme, the Junior class captured the honors of the hall decorating competition. This was the second time in THS history that the seniors didn't win the award. The sale of corsages and boutonnieres took place throughout the week with proceeds going to COE. The climax of the Homecoming festivities was the crowning of the king and queen, Martin Villegas and Adela Palafox. The queen and her attendants were driven around the stadium in Ford T-Birds.

A THS flag girl watched as the Homecoming finalists were introduced at the Pep assembly (upper right).

Rodeo

Boots, cowboy hats and other western gear signaled the beginning of Rodeo Week. In order to display their rodeo spirit, students were encouraged to buy western style garter belts made by the members of the Student Council. At the end of the week the band marched in the Rodeo Day Parade. The Rodeo King and Queen were Winston Warr and Regina Rojas.

Special Events

In order to fund a trip to Disneyland, the band held a contest in which students guessed the amount of beans in a tuba. (center left)

As graduation approached Sandy Riback (top right) measured graduating students for caps and gowns.

This year's Special Events reflected years of tradition.

The Junior girls upset the Senior girls in the Tidy Bowl. Because of the aggressive nature of this year's game school officials are considering discontinuing the game. The Student Council sponsored Friendship Week which included a reversal of male, female roles. Rodeo week, one of Tucson High's more traditional events, ended as the Marching One-hundred made their annual appearance in the parade. Many of the homerooms sponsored Christmas boxes which allowed students to donate food and clothing to needy families.

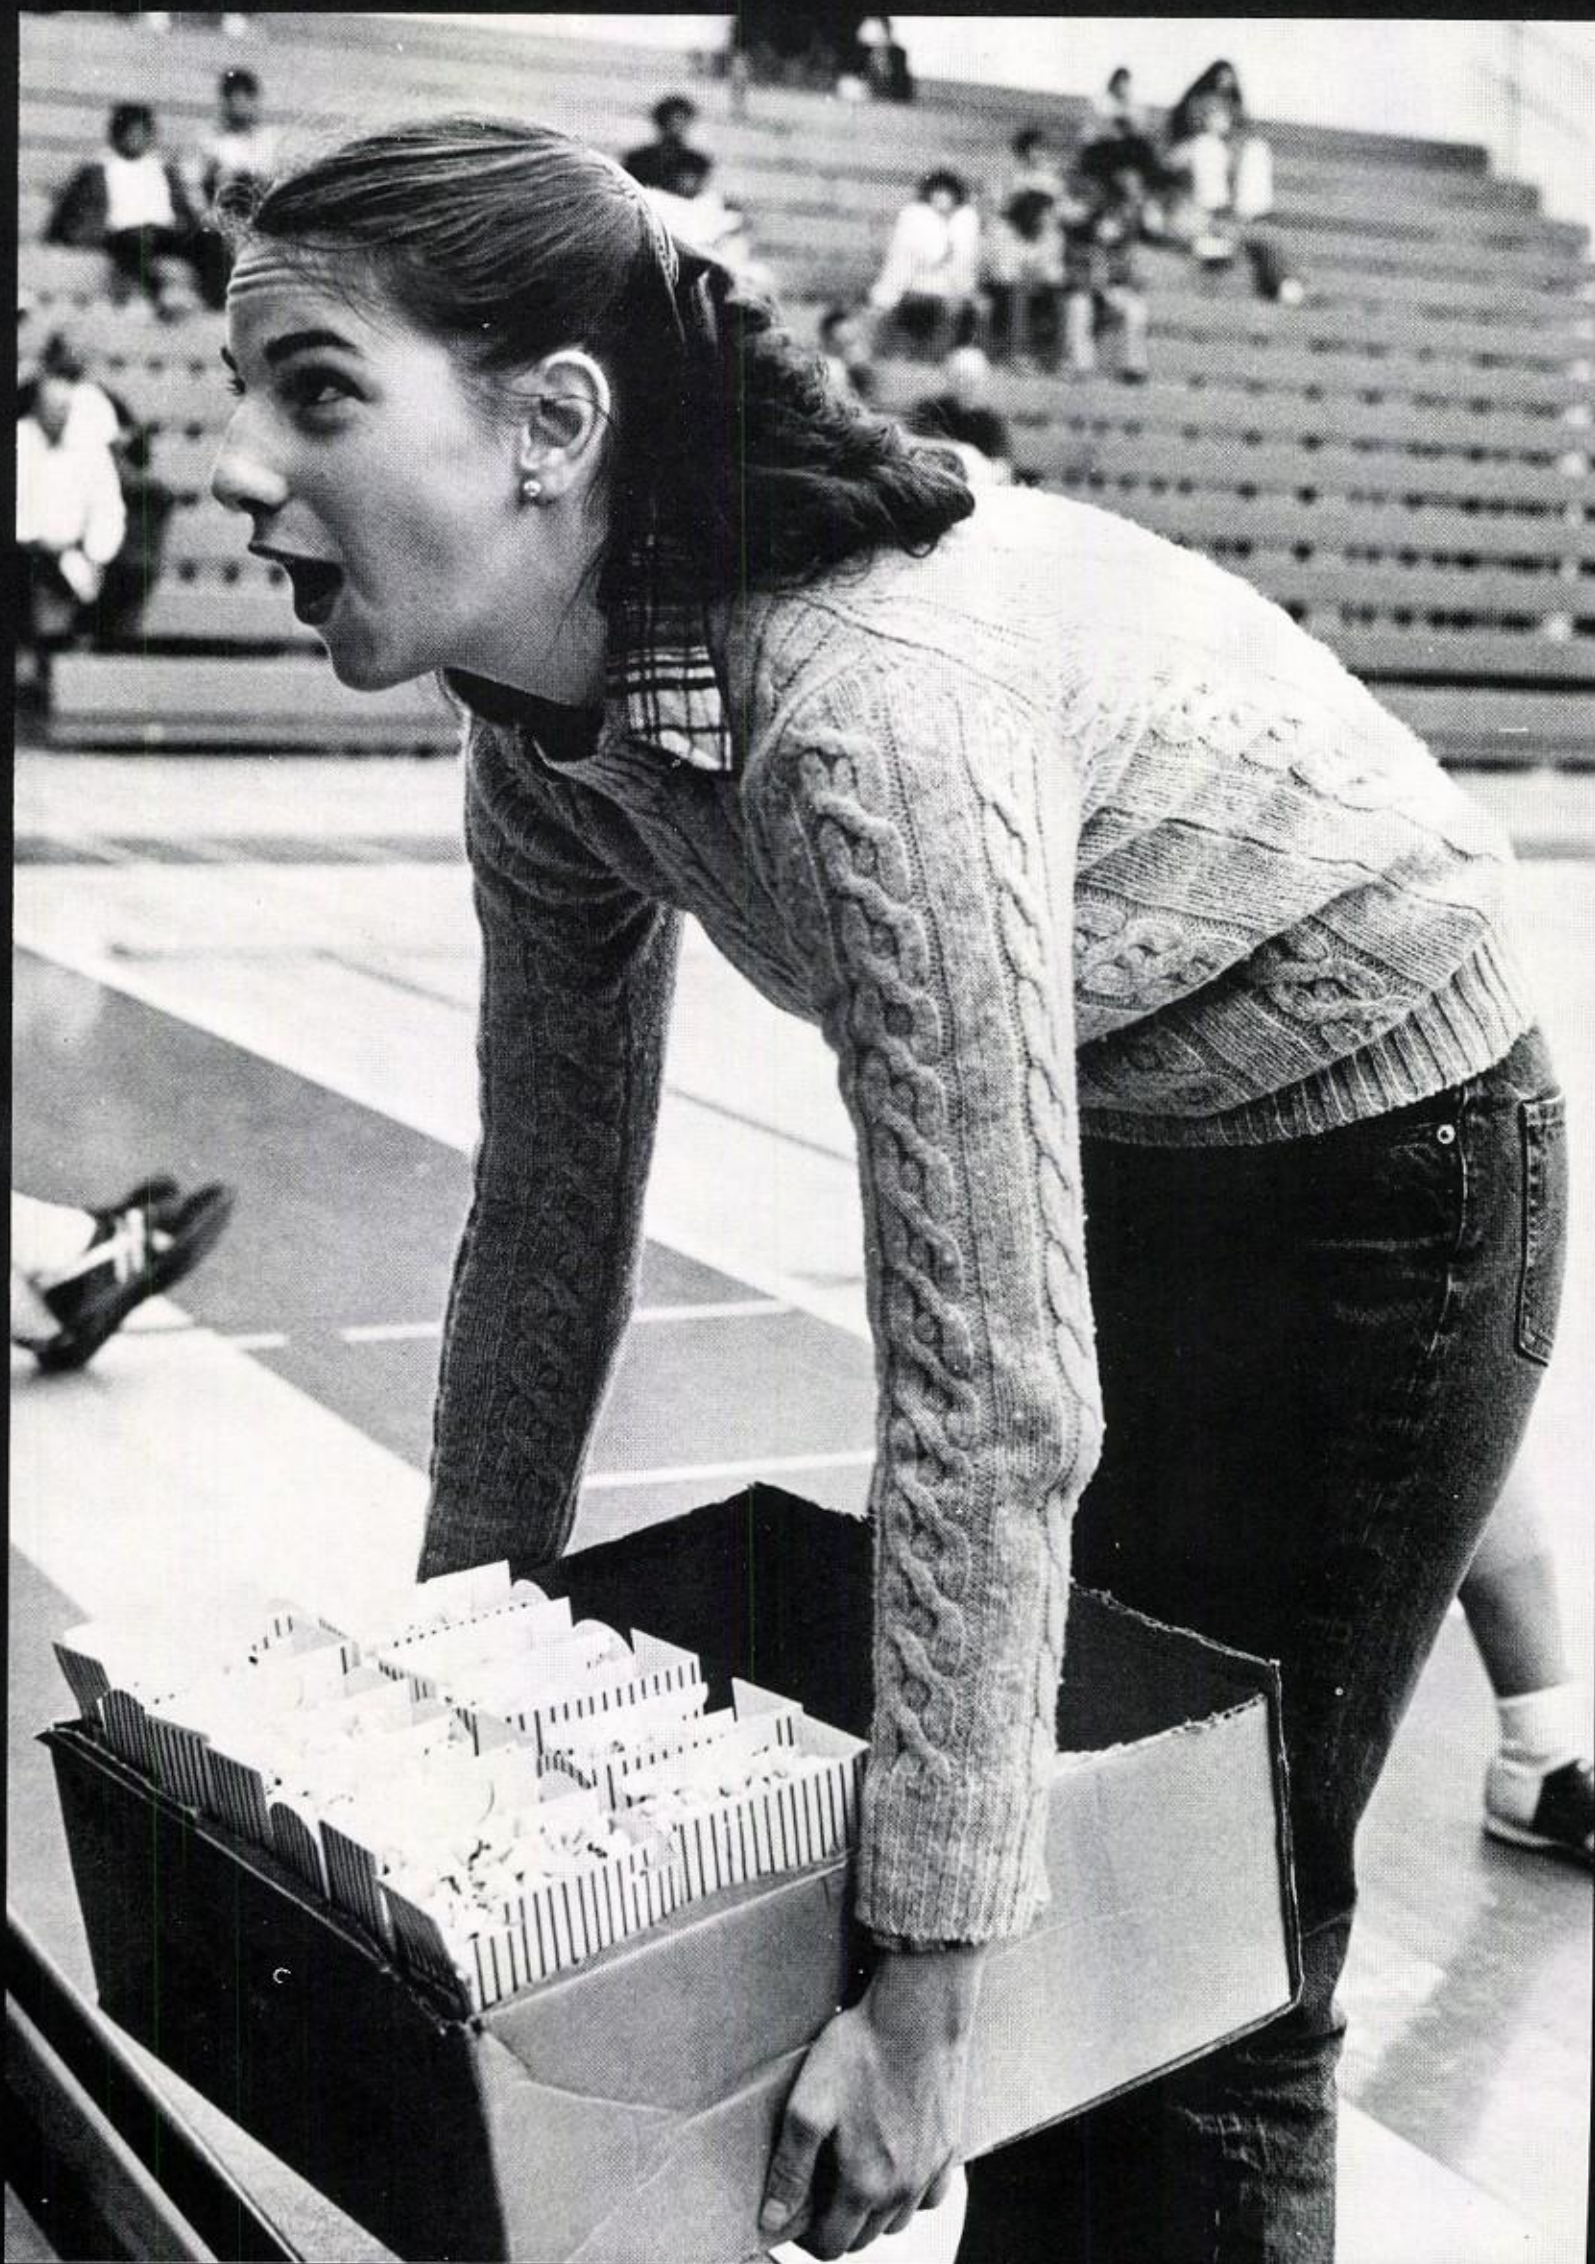

From many efforts one accomplishment

At THS, students of all levels of ability were assigned to the same classes. Often the students with the highest scholastic abilities received the honors and awards. However, other students who performed their best received the equally important reward of self-satisfaction. Students decided early in high school whether or not to strive for honors. Although some students seemed to achieve without effort, it had taken years to build up to their accomplishments. Early in their educational careers they had acquired skills which brought them closer to their goals. Some students found that gains required sacrifices and demands on their time. Every effort made led to achievement and led the student to his ultimate goal. Three factors influenced the extent to which students applied themselves. Teachers provided opportunities and encouragement. Parents' interest, or lack of interest, was a definite influence as was the students own desire to achieve. Some chose not to compete. Apathy was often the reason. Whatever the case, students found that each accomplishment was achieved only after many efforts.

Honors

Top Twenty

As the Top Twenty began their final year in high school, they worked to maintain their ranking taken at the end of their junior year. Each of these seniors had the opportunity to serve as a junior honor guard at graduation last year. Those who maintained their grade averages received a gold cord given only to the top twenty seniors during the graduation ceremonies.

Maria Morlacci (lower left) watched the passing traffic as she spent some time jogging around the campus after school.

In a match at the Doubletree Inn, Mars Thierman (lower right) connected on a backhand to wrap up the second set.

- Xavier de la Garza was actively involved in Student Government during high school. He served as vice president of the senior class and was a member of NHS. He participated in sports, dancing, and worked on his car. He was employed at Hardee's as a cook and hoped to major in engineering in college.

- Working through COE, Linda Altenhof was a secretary at the University of Arizona College of Business Education after school. She was a member of NHS and of her church youth group. In her free time she played the piano and guitar.

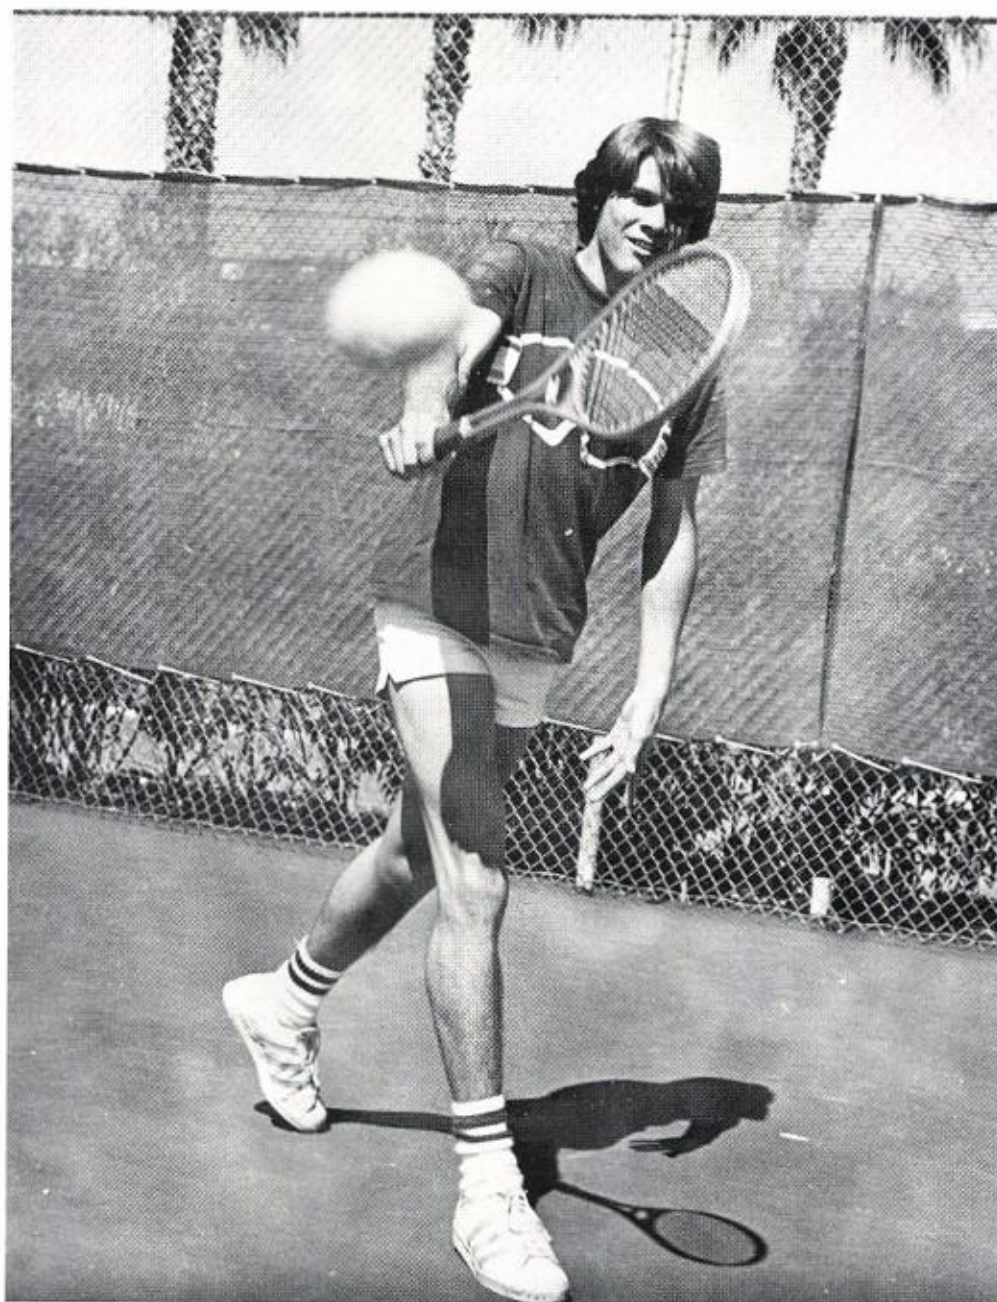

- Sports played an important part in Mars Thierman's high school life. He was a member of the Ski Club and the Varsity Tennis Team. He enjoyed attending football games at the U of A and expected to major in accounting.

- During her senior year, Maria Morlacci was a member of the Speech Squad, Tucsonian staff and was president of the National Honor Society. She enjoyed photography, modern dancing and jogging. She attended Girls' State and planned to enroll at the University of Arizona.

- Senior class president David Brooks was a spotter for the home football games. He was also President of NFL and gave extemporaneous speeches at tournaments. He spent much of his time running for the Track and Cross Country teams.

- Interior Decorating and computer technology were Mary Lou D'Angelo's main interests. She worked at Wendy's and was involved in the campaign for Governor Bruce Babbitt. She planned to attend an out of state college after graduation.

While playing her cello after school, Anne Johnson (bottom) played one of her favorite sonatas.

- Loretta Chacon held an after school job at Taco Bell, and enjoyed playing the piano in her leisure time. She attended Girl's State and was a member of NHS and the Tucsonian staff.

- National Honor Society vice-president Bari Weick swam for the varsity swim team and the University Aquatic Club. He attended Boys' State and was the curriculum editor of the yearbook.

- Troubador member Karen Van Oosterhout was in the Ski Club and also traveled with the Scuba and Hiking Clubs. She took jazz and tap-dancing classes and was employed by Swenson's.

- Since she was interested in business as a college major, Amy Pleiter worked as a program director for Levy's Merchandising, Modeling, Retail, and Fashion Youth Board. She was a member of NHS, Concert Choir and Troubadors.

- Olivia Valenzuela enjoyed hiking, baking and traveling. She attended Anytown and was a member of Bi-Chem-Phy, Speech, NHS, and her church youth group. She was president of her Junior Achievement company and editor of the honors section of the yearbook.

- Singing in his church choir and playing the trumpet in Orchestra and the Marching Band were Richard Porter's main activities. His position as a lay distributor at the Regina Clare Seminary reflected his interest in religion. He planned to major in theology at St. John's in California.

- Although Tucsonian Editor-in-Chief Anne Johnson worked at Austin's, she still found time for other activities such as the Hiking Club and NHS. She was an Anytown delegate and planned to study social sciences in college.

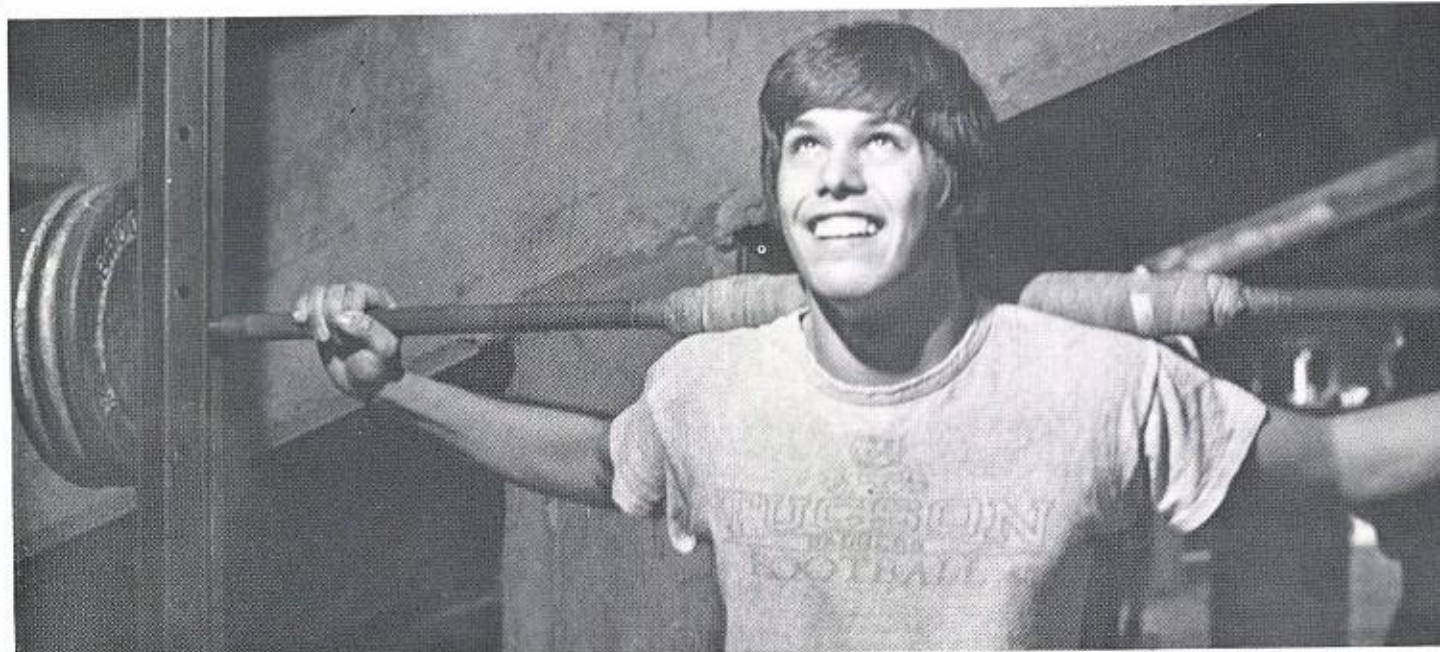

Top Twenty

- Anytowners Chris Radtke sang with the Troubadours and the Concert Choir and was a member of NHS. He weight lifted and played for the Varsity football Team.

- Playing softball and listening to music were Elizabeth Francisco's favorite pastimes. She was a member of the NHS and worked as a legal secretary aide through COE.

- Ballet dancing and music were some of Carisa Endrizzi's special interests. She was a member of the Troubadours, NHS and was vice president of the Scuba Club. In her spare time she enjoyed collecting antiques and bicycling.

- Janet Hogan was president of the Concert Choir and Troubadours. She enjoyed jogging, swimming and attending her church youth council meetings. She planned to enroll at the University of Arizona.

Facing Page: After eating lunch off campus, Craig Waller (top) biked back to school to attend his afternoon classes.

Bill Longton and Eric Finical revised a computer program (bottom) in their Electronic Data Processing class.

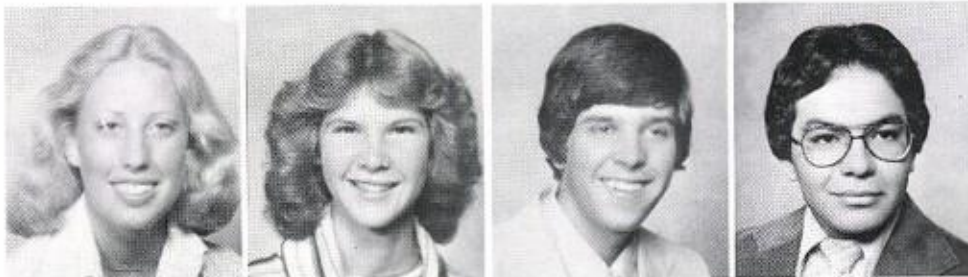

- Captain of the Boys' Swim Team Eric Finical liked racquetball and dancing the Country Swing. In the future he hoped to major in Business Management.

- Bill Longton was a member of the Swim Team and the Scuba Club. He was employed by the Old Pueblo Athletic Club as a lifeguard.

- Anytown delegate Craig Waller was president of a 4-H club and a member of the Marching Band. He liked hiking, drawing and bicycling.

The National Honor Society began the year by planning new projects to help the Tucson community. Its members tutored THS students in subjects such as math and science and sold programs and popcorn at home basketball games. Following tradition, they made and sold Heart-O-Grams for Valentines Day. Special Honors

Students at Tucson High strove to achieve

Special Honors this year by their involvement in academic, civic and extra-curricular activities. THS had one National Merit semi-finalist this year, and sent eight students to the American Legions' Boys' and Girls' State.

- The U of A awarded Bari Weick and Richard Porter with Baird Scholarships for their outstanding academic merit.

- THS' Student Advisory Council, chosen in a student body election, was Eric Butler, Randy Lee, Jane Newman, Robin Perry and alternate Lyle Garitano.

From many sources one education. Each student became aware that there were many alternatives offered by the school curriculum. He found that this curriculum not only covered the courses needed for the completion of his graduation requirements but also included vocational and recreational classes. Classes were chosen as an individual preference partially based on future aspirations. Teachers were also important factors in students' choice of classes. For the immediate present it was the student's prerogative to seriously apply himself or simply get by. By having SPHS located on Tucson High's campus and through programs such as GATE (Gifted and Talented Education) students could take part in specially designed, accelerated courses. The curriculum was not the only educating force during the year. Students, whether known only as classmates or as close friends, became the teachers. Every aspect of the school—the curriculum, the student body, the teachers—blended together to give the students a common education.

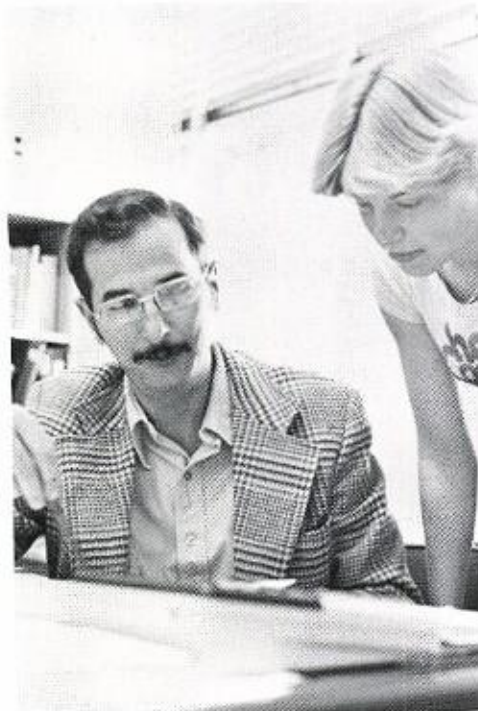

Curriculum

Administration

“Emphasizing the positive” was the major goal of THS’ administration this year, according to principal Kenneth Miles. The administrators worked to promote a “positive learning atmosphere” at THS and to overcome some negative publicity the school had received. Mr. Miles also pointed to the specialized programs available to students of all levels and to the frequent curriculum revisions as evidence of the quality education offered at Tucson High School.

Mr. Miles (bottom left) read a biology textbook while observing the new year long biology course.

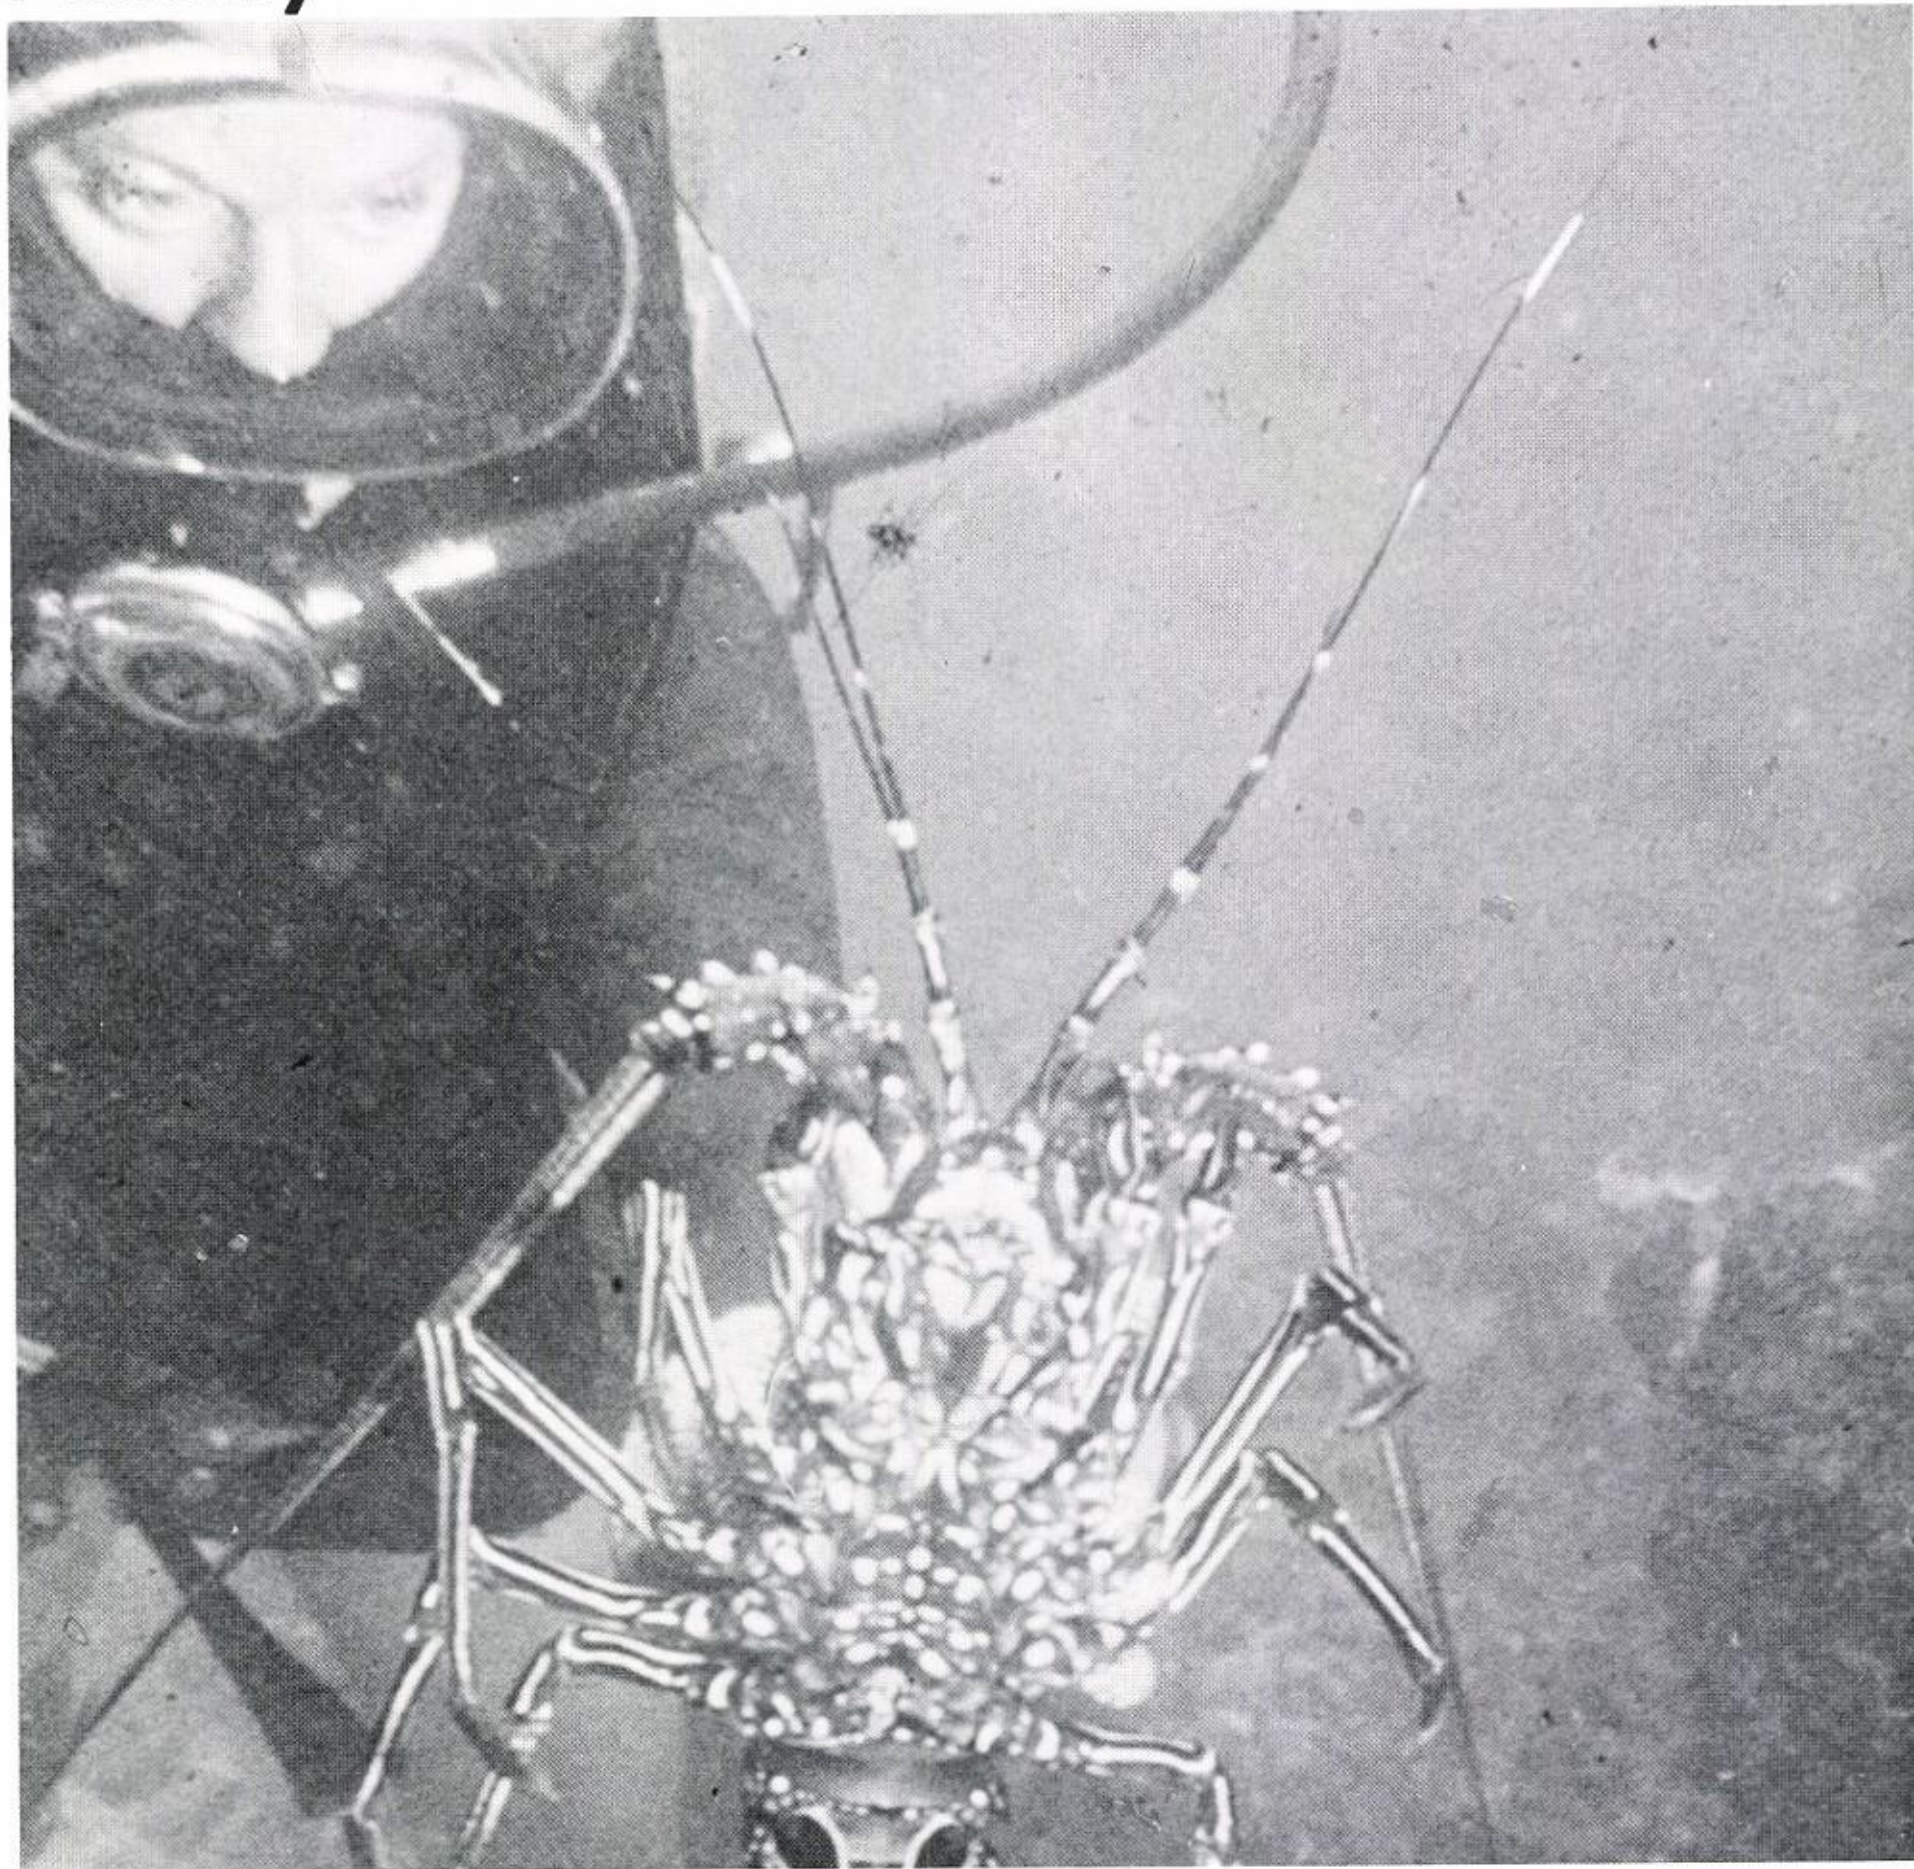

- A one week walkout by teachers in October was the first teachers strike in the District's history. Among their demands were a larger pay increase, a limit on class size, and greater control over classroom discipline. Schools remained open, but fewer than forty percent of the students attended classes. The School Board and the Tucson Education Association each brought in mediators to resolve the strike. Teachers returned to the classroom when the two sides reached agreements on the major issues and made a no reprisals guarantee.

- Poor health and differences with the school board led Superintendent Wilbur Lewis to resign in December.

- Concern over the poor attendance habits of many THS students brought about the administration's decision to alter the method of taking attendance. Roll sheets were collected by the Attendance Office each period instead of weekly, enabling the office to keep more accurate records. Students who were found to have excessive unexcused absences were dropped from school.

Faculty

Tucson High teachers were as busy in their spare time as they were in the classroom. Betsy Babich appeared on a television talk show to discuss "how the new Home Economics fits into today's world." Dana Kerstich worked underwater in the Gulf of California to help her husband write a book about Rocky Shore Fish. Typifying the drive to stay in shape, Ellen Shainline jogged and played racquetball. Arts and crafts were also a popular pastime for teachers.

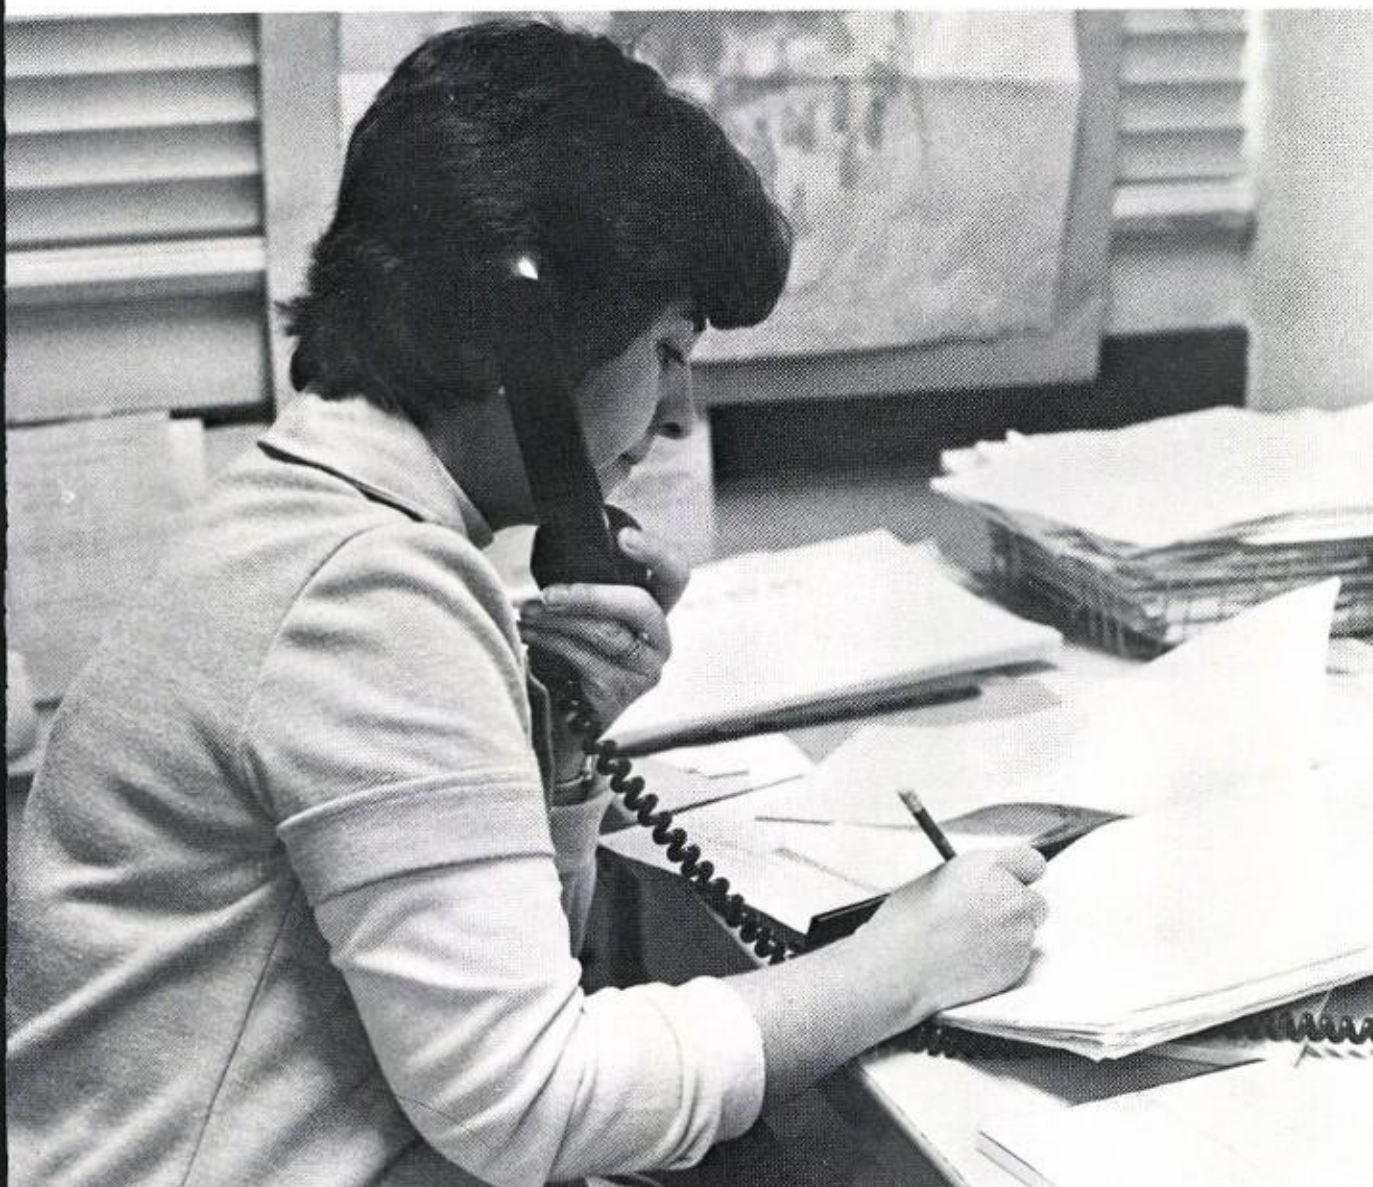

Counselors

Library

This year students could check library books out for three weeks at a time instead of two. This cut down on constant renewals and a decrease was seen in overdue books. Physically, the library acquired new louvers to replace the worn out blinds, and plans were made for repainting and new carpeting. Counselors began a new orientation program for incoming freshmen. Meeting with them seven times during the year, counselors helped freshmen get better acquainted with Tucson High School, as well as helping them start to plan for their future.

Librarians: Robert Kaiser, Rosia Key, William Wolfe.

English

Reading

A complete curriculum revision was planned for the English department. Teachers met weekly to discuss goals and ideas. Freshman and Sophomore students would be combined and placed in different class levels on the basis of writing samples, teacher recommendations, and test scores. The department also planned to place a greater emphasis on basic writing skills. In addition to freshmen reading classes, a class for sophomores was offered. Reading classes were also available for juniors and seniors, but were not restricted to any one grade level.

Students in Freshman English took notes as they watched a filmstrip on how to write a research paper (bottom).

Languages

Preparing ethnic foods was a popular activity in foreign language classrooms. French crepes and German potato pancakes were among the dishes sampled. The Spanish-English bilingual program was expanded to include a second year course and an additional first year class. Videotape machines were used to allow students to watch and hear themselves speak in a foreign language. Mr. Miranda's classes made Spanish commercials, and Mrs. Gilligan's French classes acted out a play using the equipment. Mr. Cawley planned to take his third year Spanish students to a Magdalena, Mexico secondary school during the spring break.

Math

Tucson High was one of two schools chosen as a site for a pilot intermediate algebra program. With an emphasis on review, the course took a year to cover the material normally taught in two quarters. Consumer math students learned about the Social Security system, and about state and federal income taxes. Portable computer terminals were brought into algebra and geometry classes, where students had the opportunity to use them.

Science

Biology instructor Mr. Dietrich received a three thousand dollar grant to improve individual instruction. The money went toward new tapes, modules and the equipment to use them. Unified Science consisted of twenty-one "ISIS" mini courses such as "Household Energy" and "Stormy Weather." Biology and Physical Science classes were changed from separate nine-week courses to yearly units. Physics students constructed a "flat plate heat collector" which, when attached to a small water pump, served as a solar water heater.

An anthropology class, World Culture, was new to the Social Studies department as part of Gate.

Guest speakers, such as a former cavalry officer from Fort Lowell, highlighted Westward Movement classes. Since 1978 was an election year, many American Government classes focused on state and local campaigns. The race for Tucson Unified School District's school board was a key topic with candidates appearing in classes to talk about the issues.

Keeping up with a nationwide trend, a new zero period jogging class was created and enjoyed immediate success. The P. E. department adopted a rotation system because of numerous scheduling problems due to excessive course-hopping. Students registered with one teacher and stayed with that teacher all year long. The sport changed every quarter. The department worked on a plan to inform registering students of the sequence of activities before they chose their class. Last year's plan of having one "co-ordinator" for each period was abandoned, giving students more individual attention.

Fine Arts

Art students painted the run-through signs for the football games during the '78-'79 season.

Another major art project was making murals for the counselors' office, and for the auto shop.

Home Ec. students emphasized gourmet foods in their cooking classes.

Personal and family relations were stressed in classes designed to cover more material than they had in the past.

A popular activity was the student operated nursery school, which allowed students to experience planning for, and working with young children in a learning situation for all involved.

Business

Manufacturers of a new brand of cola sent a free case of their product to Mrs. Row's Free Enterprise class in response to a letter she wrote. The class videotaped commercials for the drink and conducted taste tests. Business Law classes took a close look at the legal system by taking trips to the Arizona Youth Center and the Juvenile Court. Students in Office Typing could specialize in legal, medical, or general secretarial typing skills. Instructor Janet Taylor brought in work from several Tucson businesses, giving students experience with actual office assignments.

DECA, Distributive Educational Clubs of America, emphasized both marketing and retailing. At the end of the year they competed in a regional competition which included written tests as well as actual selling and advertising.

For the first time, COE had three male members. COE worked in class and on the job to improve their office skills. A banquet was held for employers toward the end of the year. Mr. Myers' DCE class decided not to have any national affiliation during the '78-'79 school year. In addition to the diversified jobs they each held after school, DCE members did volunteer work in the community. Some earned up to $1,300 working sixteen hours per week.

Programs for students with special needs such as the handicapped, gifted and the learning disability students were served by the Adaptive Education department. Participants in the On-The-Job Training program earned school credit while learning job skills. The department worked with various outside agencies to meet the needs of its students.

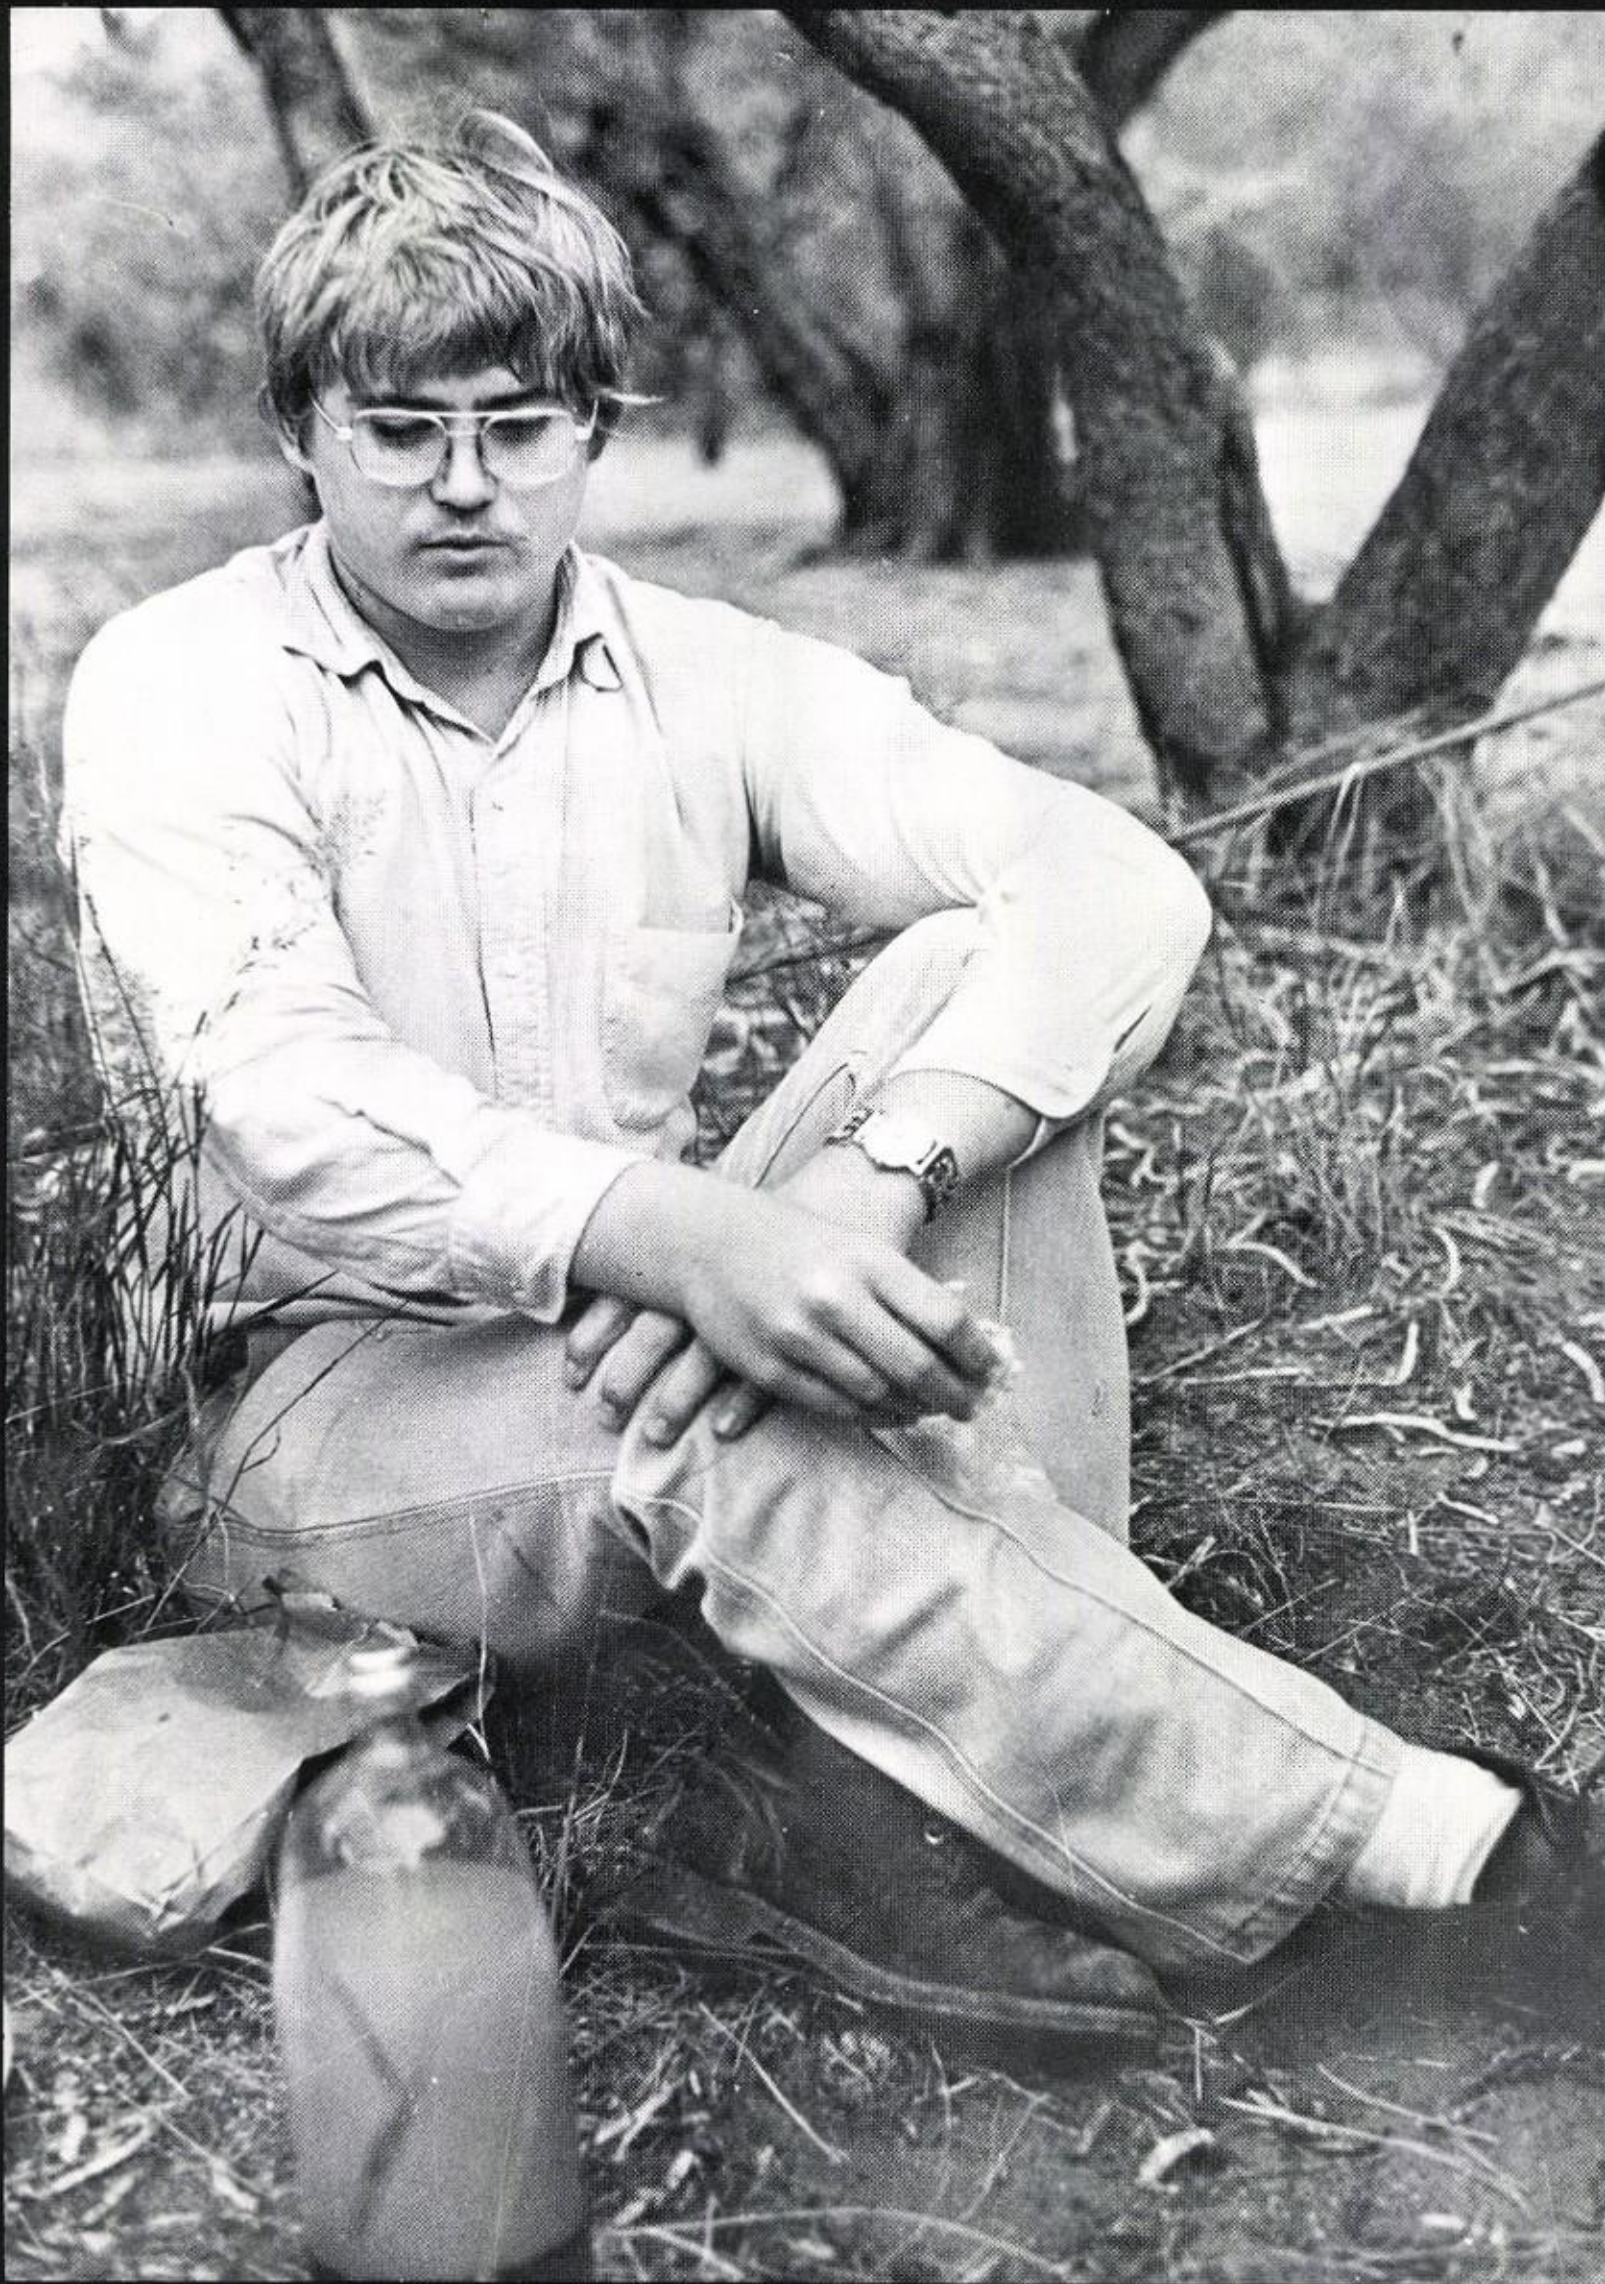

From many people one interest.

Students discovered outlets for sharing their unique ideas and personalities in the many activities they were able to participate in at THS. Each student joined clubs for his own reasons. Whether it was to become more involved, to meet new people or to fill time, each club member shared the common interest represented by the club. The Hiking, Scuba and Ski clubs gave students the opportunity to participate in activities they may otherwise have been unable to. For those who wished to contribute to or entertain the community there was Red Cross-Med Start and Los Tucsonenses. Through student government, publication groups and musical groups, skills were acquired which could later be put to use in a career or as a hobby. Some students remained uninvolved because they were either too busy outside of school to put in the time it would take or because they felt these activities accomplished nothing. School involvement was, for most people, the best way to share their interests.

Under the direction of Bonnie Baker, who replaced Ed Hughes who was on sabbatical, the Concert Choir continued the tradition of holding a spaghetti dinner to raise money for the Solo and Ensemble Festival held at Catalina High School. Peter Williams and Geri Payne from Pima Community College helped direct the group during 2nd and 4th periods. Along with the four concerts at THS the choir planned to participate in the All-State and All-City competitions.

Lyre's Club

To commemorate songs of the 17th century, the Tucson High Troubadors planned a trip to Flagstaff to participate in a Madrigal competition. During the year the group spent most of their time performing at local junior high schools and churches. The Troubadors raised over five hundred dollars at a Jog-a-Thon held at the U of A. Senior members of the band made up the Lyre's Club at THS this year. They raised funds for the band by gathering newspapers on Saturdays and recycling them.

Band

The 1978-79 THS band marched in the Veterans Day parade and the Rodeo parade. Performances at half times of the football games culminated at the U of A's band day where the Marching 100 received a superior rating. Later in the year the band planned a trip to Disneyland.

In May the Tucson High Orchestra was invited to travel to Flagstaff to perform at the graduation ceremony at Northern Arizona University. During the school year the group gave eight concerts including their annual Christmas concert and Spring Program. Seventeen of the eighteen Orchestra members who tried out made the regional Orchestra. The group also participated in All-City in March.

Drama

Drama productions included "You Can't Take It With You," performed in November, and "Blithe Spirit," scheduled for production in March. Thespians raised money by constructing a Haunted House for Halloween which was open to the student body. Pantomimists produced a Winter Mime Show and also performed at local Elementary and Junior High Schools.

Terpsi

Opening their season with a nostalgic routine, Terpsi performed at the homecoming assembly in November. In January the dancers presented a demonstration entitled "What is Modern Dance?" for several elementary schools. Terpsichore's annual school assembly and their spring concert with the Orchestra highlighted the last quarter.

Sign Language

Hoping to increase awareness toward deaf and blind people around the Tucson area, students and teachers founded the Sign Language Club. Calling themselves The Tucson Signers, the group met every Wednesday afternoon. Members planned a student exchange with The Arizona School for The Deaf and Blind.

At a club meeting for sign language members, Jean Maez (top left) attempted to spell out the word "special."

During one of the sign language meetings (top right) Susan Everett worked to memorize the basics of sign language.

David Reid, silhouetted against an incoming storm, stopped to enjoy the view from a high rock in the Catalinas (bottom).

Hiking Club members traveled to Mt. Lemmon, and Madera and Sabino Canyons. According to sponsor Joe Kelly, the club had a slower year than usual, planning only one or two hikes monthly. No fund raisers were scheduled due to low overhead costs but "participation was excellent" with at least ten members attending each hike.

A Christmas Ski trip to Salt Lake City highlighted the activities of the 1978-79 Ski Club. Members raised money to fund trips by participating in the Pole-n' Ski Swap meet at the Doubletree Inn. Also planned was a Rodeo Ski trip to Telluride, Colorado.

NFL

Mrs. Jane Nott, National Forensic League coach, felt "this was a year of rebuilding for the team." Though the squad was young, it remained one of the largest chapters in the state. Members attended tournaments at high schools and colleges throughout Arizona. Money raised from the sale of M&M's was used to pay national dues, finance parties and help pay expenses for National qualifiers.

The club also landscaped the Arizona Children's Home with native plants. Members appeared on KZAZ TV when Elven Caraway the FFA Western Regional Vice President visited the Chapter.

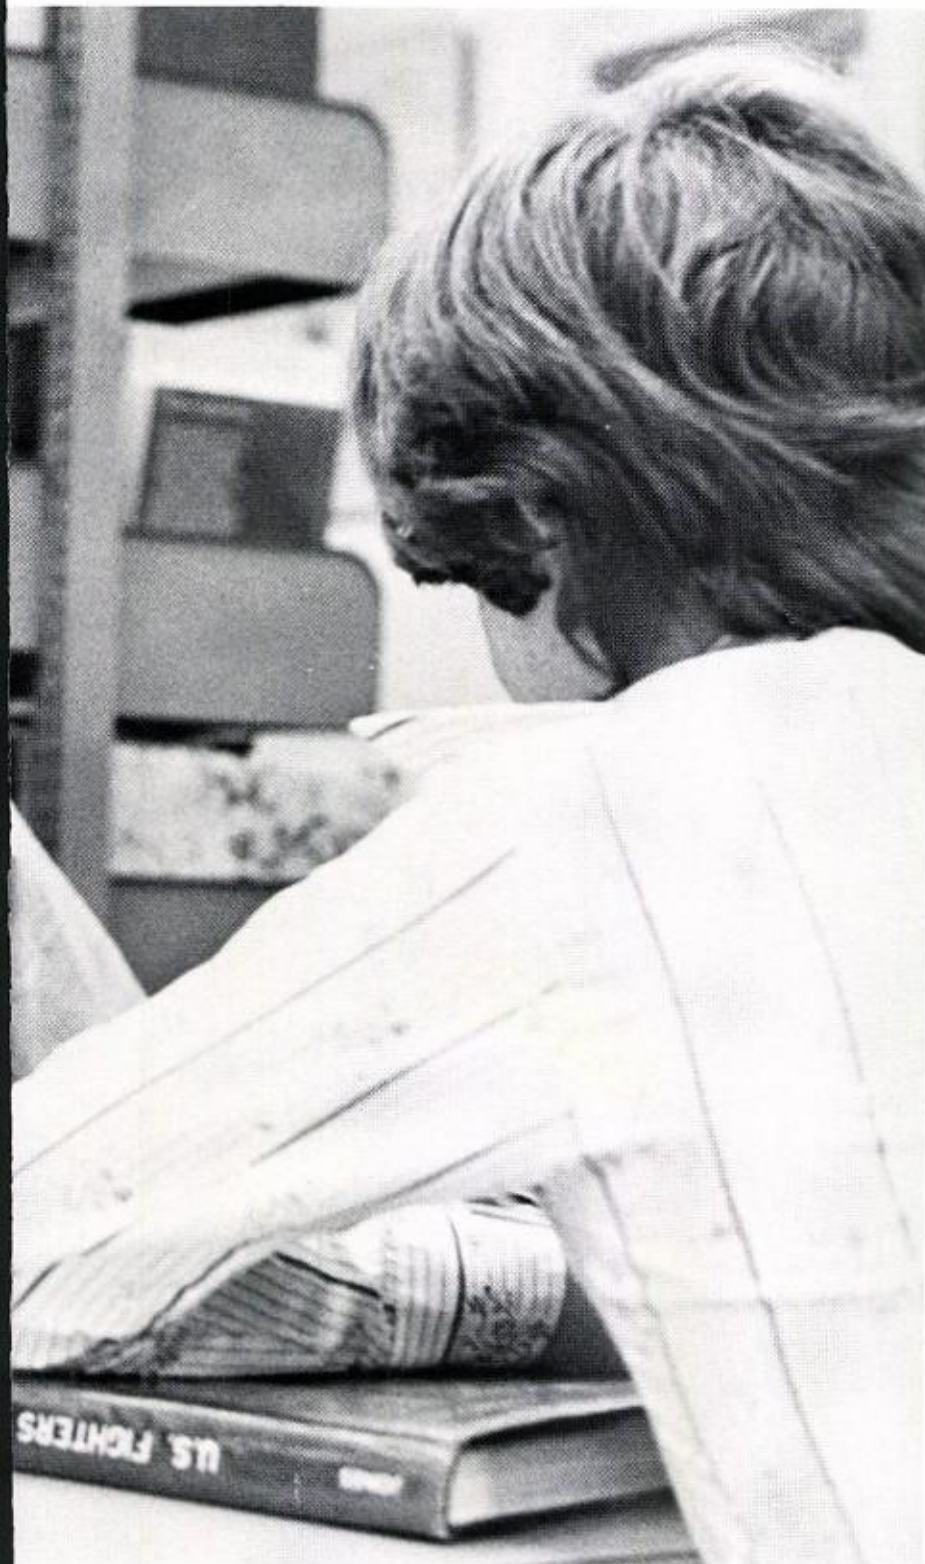

Chess

Exchange Programs

As participants in the Region IV Open High School Chess Tournament, the THS Chess Club placed fifth out of the twenty-one teams competing. On the individual basis, Steve Bagalini placed first and Edwin Tellmen fourth. The group defeated three other schools in a meet at Tombstone, and went to the March State Regionals. Through the American Field Service Katrina Kupka and Rossana D'Arrigo were able to attend THS as exchange students. Participants in the AFS program have a choice of a long term exchange in the winter or a shorter one in the summer.

Chronicle

In January the Cactus Chronicle marked the 60th Anniversary of the publication with a twelve page edition. This year's staff, under the supervision of Erika Burr, was one of the youngest ever, consisting mainly of Sophomores and Juniors. During the summer four members of the Chronicle staff went to a publications camp to improve their journalistic skills.

From many athletes one team.

Sports attracted students from all areas of the school. Although nothing, except his ability, limited the individual's choice of a sport, his social, racial and sexual group often determined the sports he went out for. THS, after completely ridding itself of the threat of a cut-back, offered a wide variety of sports. Students channeled their time and energy into this area for many reasons ranging from a desire to win scholarships to participating purely for enjoyment. No matter what the individual reason for joining was, each athlete wanted a team he could be proud of. Students found that no one team member was good enough to guarantee a successful team by himself. It took the combined efforts of each individual to build a team. In an attempt to make their team the best, coaches and fellow athletes encouraged each other to strive for self-improvement which benefited the entire team. Students who did not take an active part in sports were able to participate as spectators. For the most part, the athletes gained a shared confidence and pride in themselves and in the team as a whole.

Varsity Football

"We intend to go out and give everybody we play a shot."

This is what Coach Bill Dawson said in a pre-season interview with the Tucson Citizen about the '78 THS Varsity football team. In his second year of coaching at Tucson High several changes were made, particularly in the offensive set-up. The team switched from the T-formation to a set-up more like the one used in professional football. The squad lost 23 men to graduation while retaining only 8. Because of this, the team was a relatively inexperienced one.

In order to prevent further injury during the Sabino game, Tom Buxton (bottom) was taped.

According to Coach Dawson, the team had a "great attitude" and "never gave up, even when the game seemed hopelessly lost."

The Badgers suffered key injuries before the season even began.

Quarterback Leonard Martinez hurt his shoulder and was unable to play in several games. Junior Danny Hill filled the open position during these games. "He really did a great job," said Dawson.

The squad's offense averaged 14 points a game, while the defense allowed the opposition over 22 points a contest.

Frosh Football

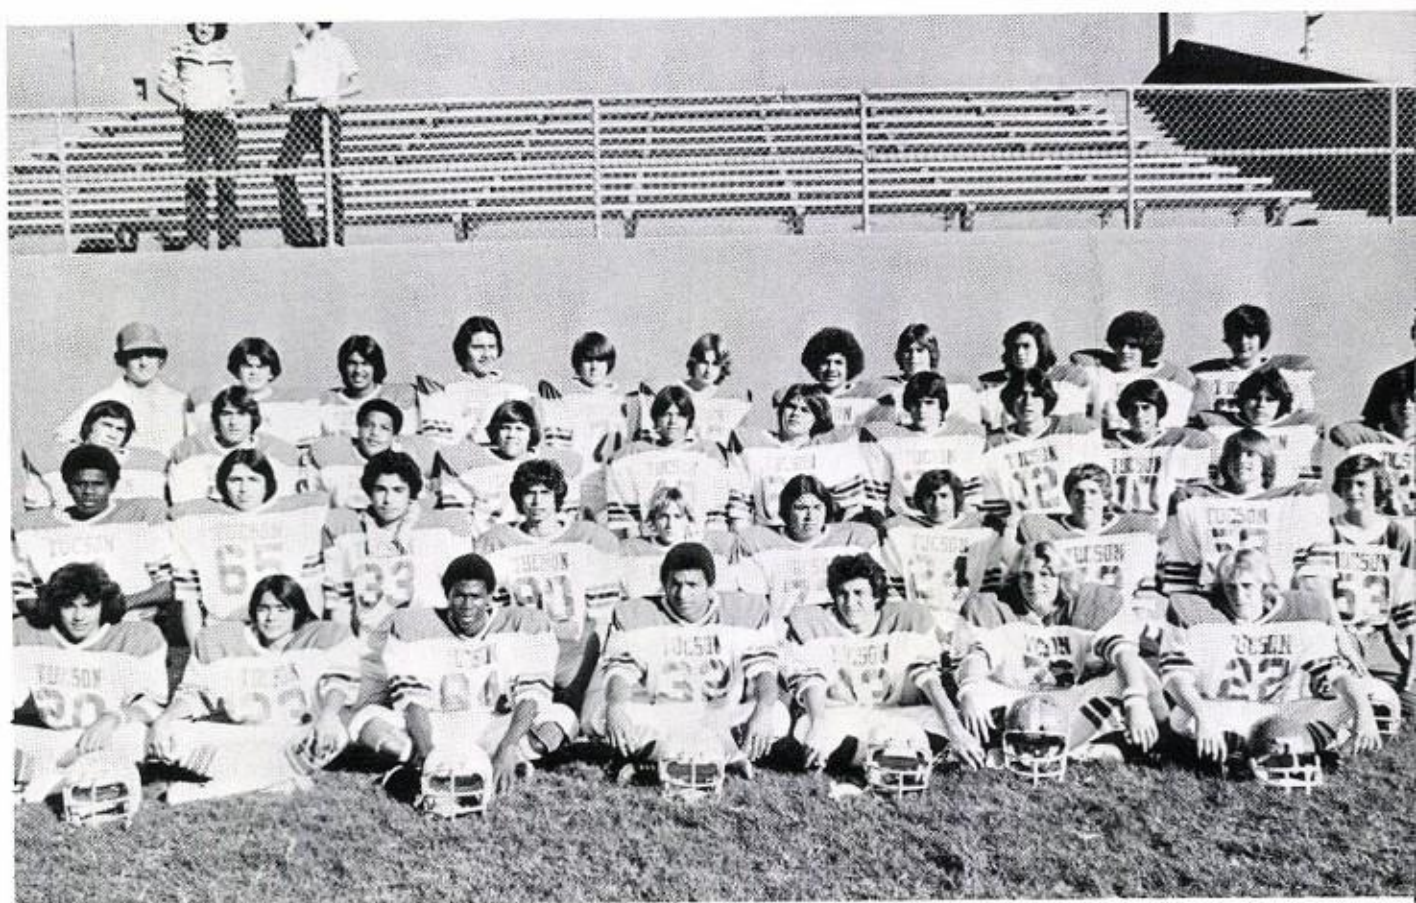

According to Coach William Kreamer, the '78 season was a year of experimentation for the Freshman Football Team. "We had an entirely new staff with a lot of great ideas," he noted. The team standouts were halfback Leroy Tamplin and center Danny Denogean. The team ended the season with 3 wins, 2 losses and 2 ties.

J. V. Football

The 1978 J. V. Football team had the best record of any THS J. V. squad since 1971. Head coach James Wandrey attributed the success to a "wide open offensive attack" and "a group of talented players." "We were a well-balanced team," he added. Standouts of the squad were quarterback Osia Lewis and defensive back Ernie Bonillas. The team averaged 24 points a game while the defense held their opponents to an average of 9 points. The team ended the season with 6 wins, 1 tie, and a single loss.

An extra point attempt by place kicker Steve Alford (center) was blocked by the Catalina defense.

Varsity Basketball

Coach Charlie Cook felt that the '78 Varsity Basketball team had to rely upon their quickness rather than their height to score against the opposing teams. "The scoring was pretty evenly spread out among the team members," he added. The defense used a full court press, while the offense relied heavily upon their fast break. Winston Warr and Kent Nasser led the team in scoring, both averaging about 13 points per contest. The team lost several close games, including a 4 point loss to Rincon, who was ranked number 1 in the city.

Varsity Basketball

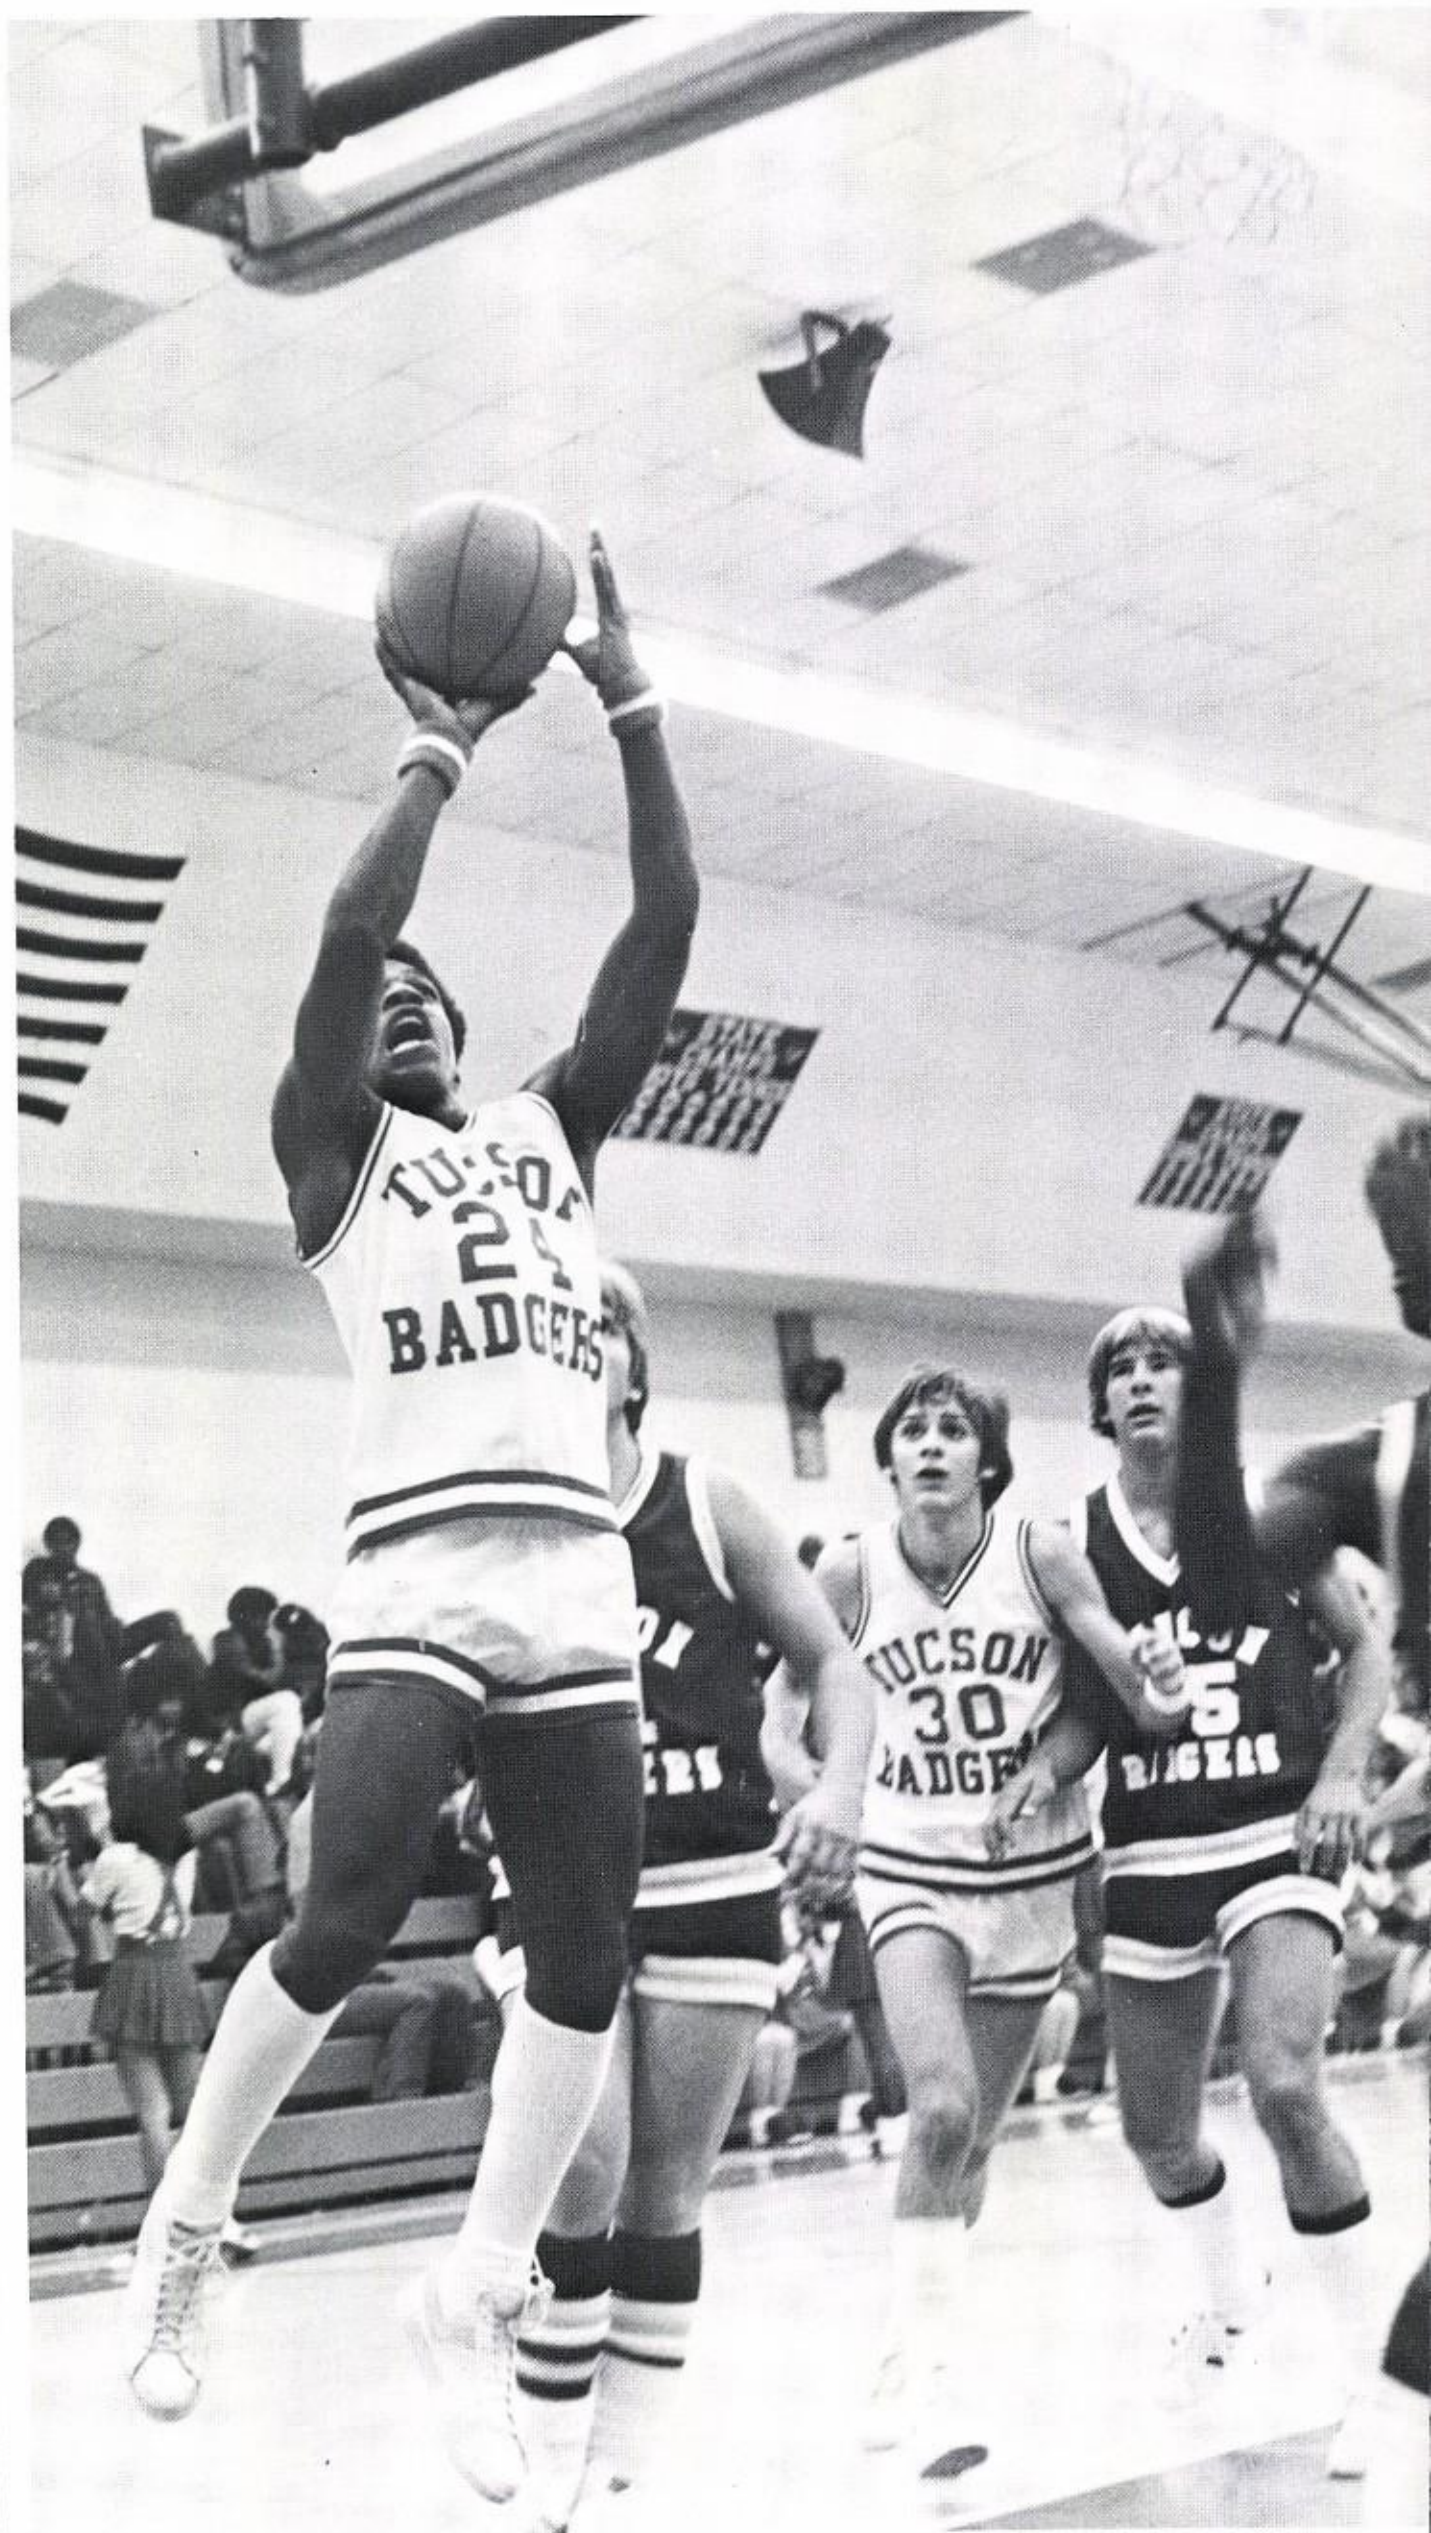

The Badgers were noted for the high percentage of free throw shots they made, which often kept them in the game. Coach Cook felt that the team would continue to improve as the season went on, and that the team "is going to do a lot better than most people think they will."

Some of the girls went to a basketball camp sponsored by the Eastern New Mexico Association at the Arizona School for the Deaf and Blind. Coached by Patsy Lee, Junior Varsity basketball was a new addition to girls sports. Twelve freshmen and sophomores were chosen for the J. V. team.

Frosh Basketball

With a new coach this year, the thirteen member freshman basketball team looked forward to improving their record of 5 wins and 19 losses. Coach David Gin stressed the basics and good offensive skills. Strong shooting guards along with good rebounding talent led to close games during the season.

After an outburst by the Amphi bench, (top left) Bryan Pablo was awarded a technical Foul shot.

After a missed shot by Santa Rita, (top right) John Vann struggled to gain control of a loose ball.

Coach Jerry Curtis and team (center) reacted to an alleged bad call by the referee during the Sabino game.

Cheerleaders

Tucson High School Cheerleaders attended camps in Flagstaff and at the University of Arizona. These camps provided intensive physical fitness programs and taught the squad new chants and cheers. Ideas for fund raising and promoting school spirit were discussed and exchanged. For the first time this year Varsity Cheerleaders held their class during zero period. Many practices were held after school. Money raising activities included car washes and selling hotdogs at the University of Arizona football games. Lynne Nixon was the new J. V. sponsor this year.

Mat Maids

Twelve girls, performing under the direction of Mrs. Jolene Low, composed the songleading squad this year. The group raised money for summer camps by holding car washes, bake sales and working concession stands at the U of A football games. Mat Maids attended a summer camp at Maryvale High School in Phoenix. There they exchanged ideas with others and learned new chants. At the end of the year, the squad planned to sell candy and bumper stickers.

Drill Team

"Our drills this year were the hardest ever, but the girls handled them well," said coach Bettye Palmer. Twenty-four Flag Girls marched and nine others were alternates. The Flag Girls performed under the direction of captains Amelia Contreras and Mary Crenshaw. Using lighter flags than previously, the girls led the halftime activities followed by the precision drills of the Letter Girls. The letter girls preceded the band, doing their routines in time to the music. Kathy Wagner, this year's only twirler, completed the half-time show with novelty routines often using a cape wrapped around her baton.

Wrestling

Coach Tom Lundy said the '78 Varsity Wrestling team consisted of several outstanding individuals, but had to forfeit several matches because they didn't have enough wrestlers. "We really had problems with injuries and with the small size of our team." Lundy attributed the small turnout to the lack of junior high wrestling programs. Three THS wrestlers competed against Japanese wrestlers. Robert DeBerry was the only wrestler who won his match. Gilbert Salazar and DeBerry took first place in their respective weight classes during the Christmas Tournament.

Cross Country

In Gerry Halfmann's second year as the Cross Country head coach, the twelve member team turned in their best record of the past few years. They also finished 10th in their division. This was not the most successful season for the Tucson High Varsity Volleyball team with a record of 0-12. Coach Helms explained that the inconsistency and inexperience of the girls on the team was probably the main cause of this year's losing season.

Track

"Depth and the eligibility of potential athletes at Tucson High" were the main concerns of Varsity Track Coach John Daggett. With the return of Tony Gaston, state champ in the 100 yard dash, and distance runners Armando Montano and David Brooks, the track team hoped to score better in dual meets. Their strong point was sprinting according to Daggett. "We seldom score points in anything else." The team looked forward to a good overall performance in the Southern Division.

Girls' Track

The '78 season was the most successful season for the girls' track team. The '79 track team had many athletes returning. Among these was Jeannie Prosser who set the school record for hurdles in 1978. Also returning were distance runners Maria Villegas and Lisa Lesny, Mary Dascoli in the 440, and Barbara Hammond in shotput and discus. Coach Anderson felt that many promising freshmen and sophomores came out for the first year of B-Track.

Swimming

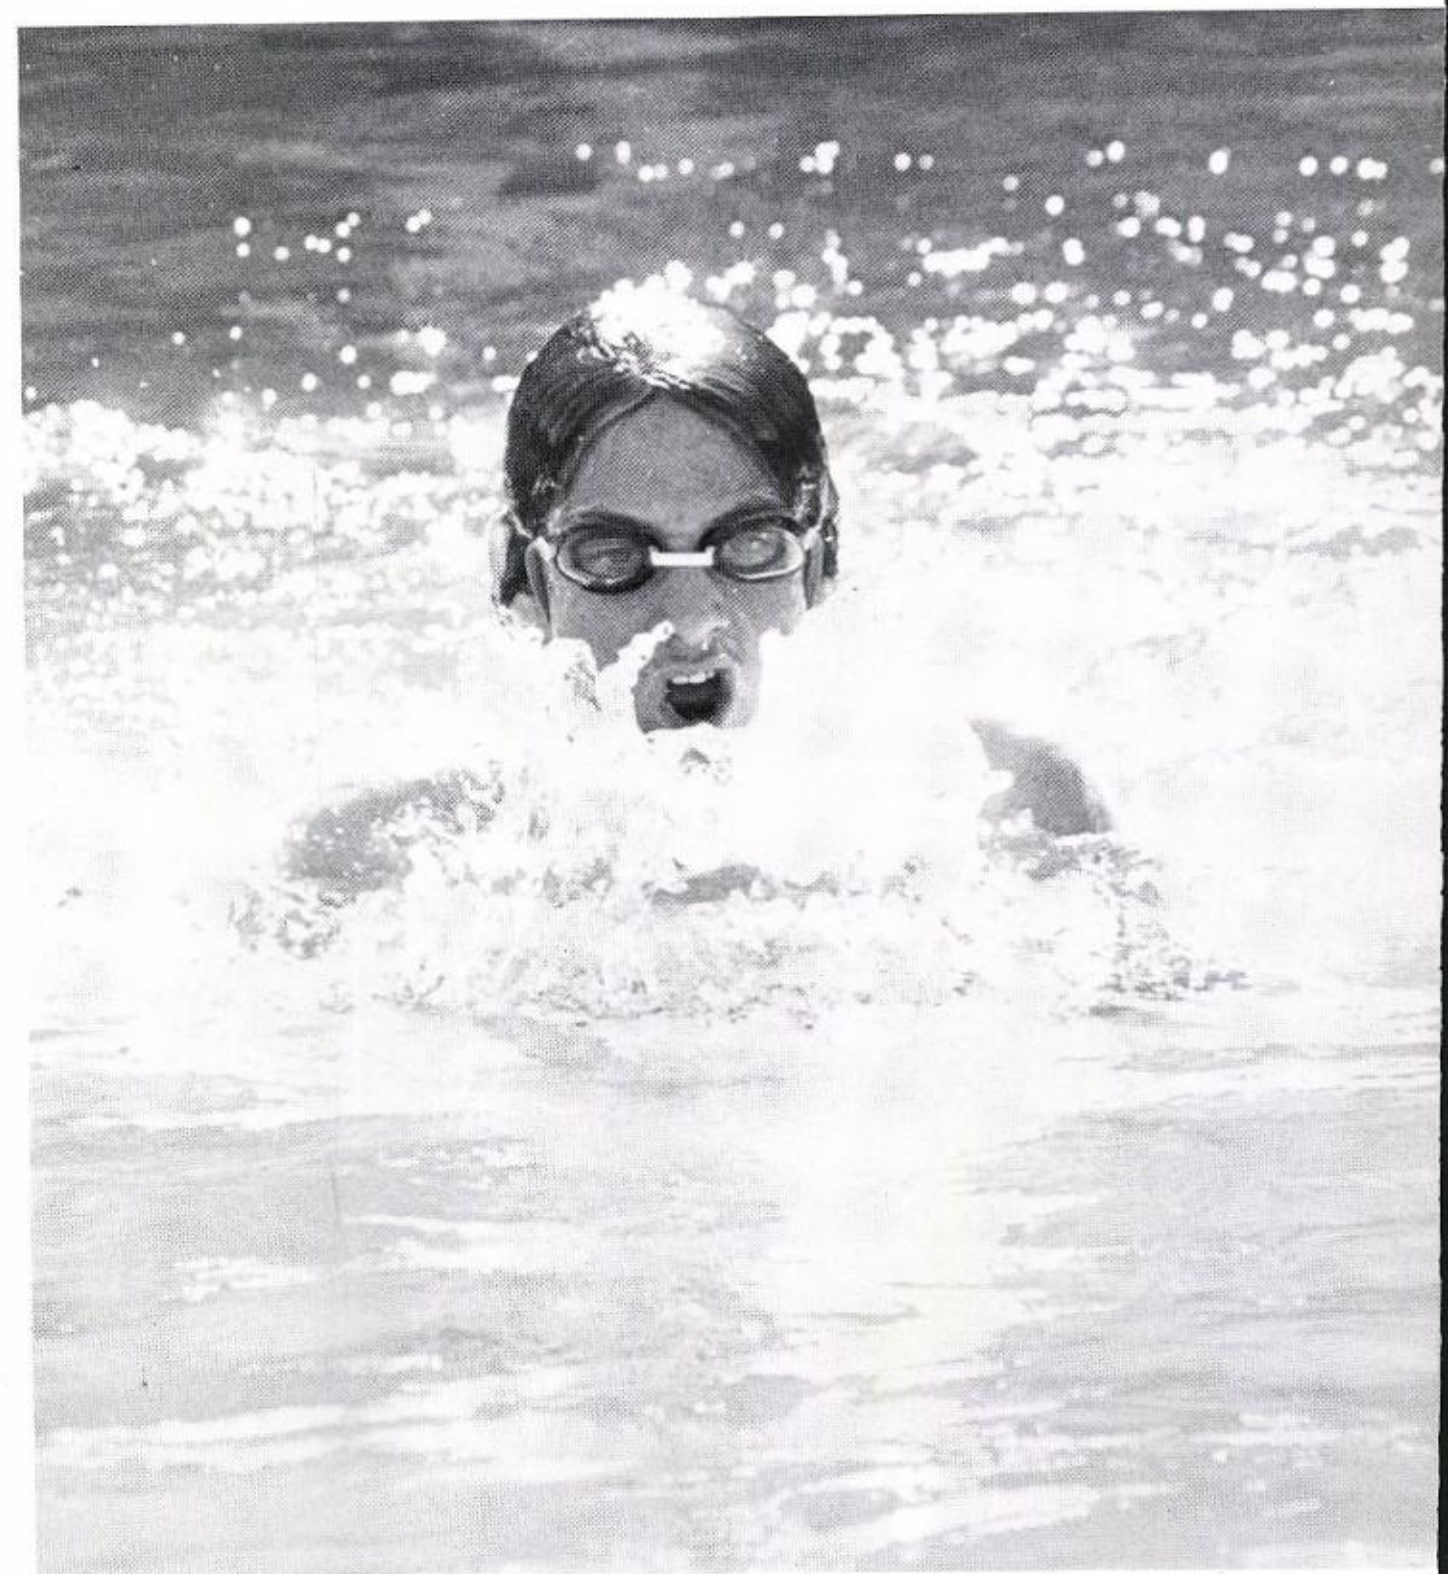

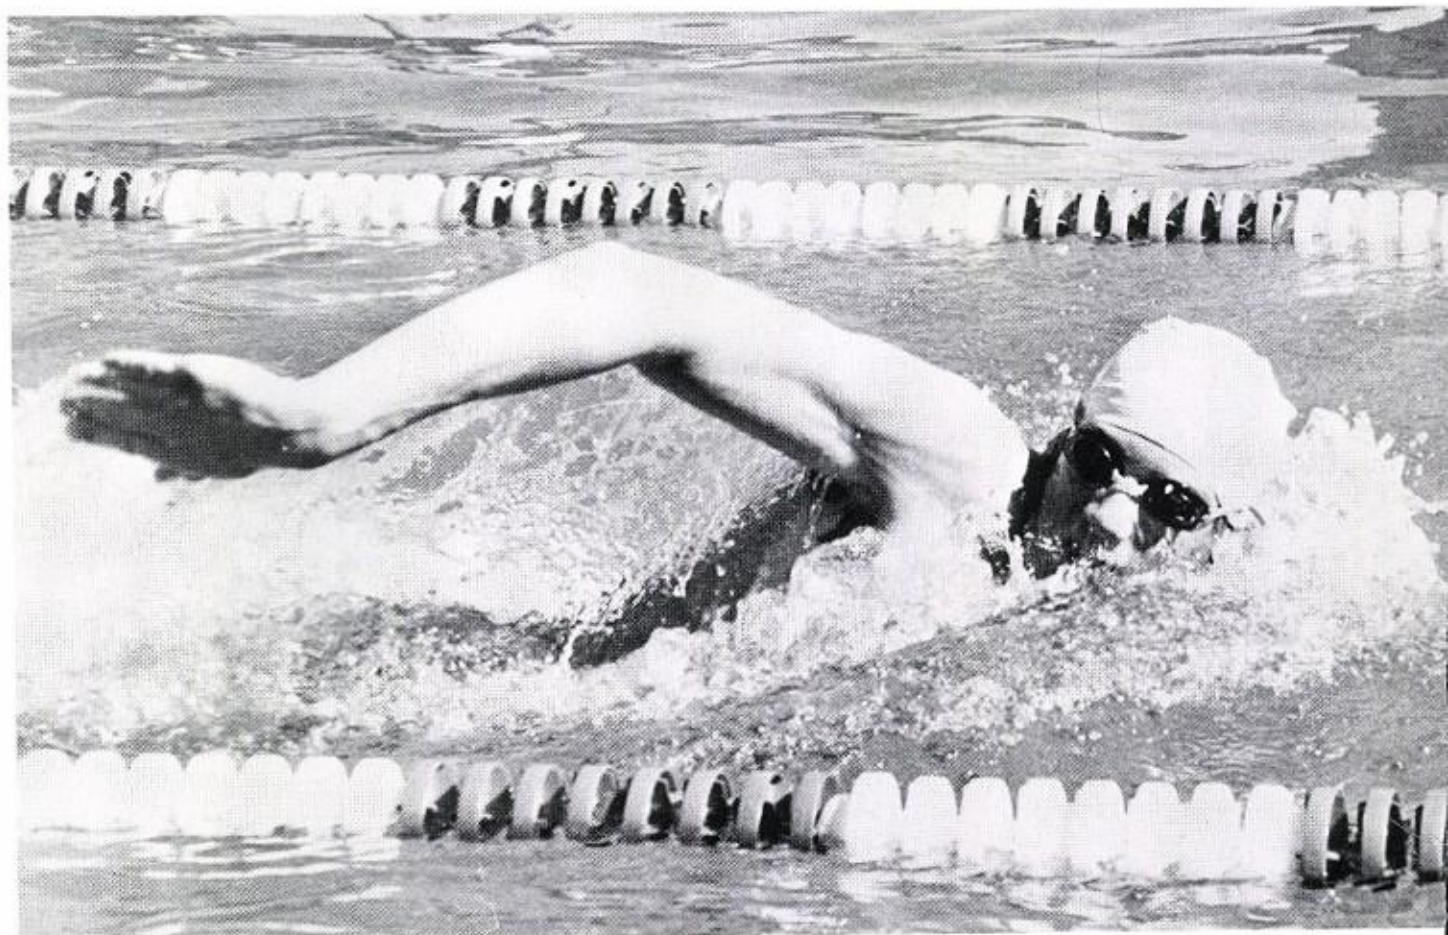

With four high school All-Americans on the '79 Varsity Swim team, Coach Wandrey looked forward to defending the state title for the second consecutive year. One goal of the team was, according to Wandrey, "to set more state records and possibly some national records." THS already held six of the eleven state records. The team hoped to rank among the top three teams nationwide. Girl's swimming coach Paula Morris was pleased with the large turnout this year and hoped that the added depth would help in the Southern Division Championships.

Tennis

Winning the State Championship capped a series of over a hundred matches with only two losses by the Boys' Tennis Team. THS won the doubles for the second straight year and placed second in singles. Despite losing eight lettermen to graduation, Coach Kissell's team looked forward to another winning season. Strong underclassmen combined with experienced seniors provided for good depth on the ladder. Barbara Wiggins' Girls' Tennis Team faced a rebuilding year with few of last year's starters returning. Junior Jane Newman was a standout, playing both number one singles and doubles.

Gymnastics

Describing the team as "very young," the Girl's Gymnastics coach Rosemary Tindall emphasized the relationship between gymnastics and dance. Coach George Dominguez felt his eleven member team had the potential for a successful season. Harry Smith led the golf team once again this year. Home matches were held at El Rio.

From many students one graduating class. Although no two students were the same, they often lost their individuality as they became simply freshmen, sophomores, juniors or seniors. Each group was attributed with specific characteristics. Freshmen were merely "baby badgers" while seniors were looked up to as upperclassmen. These social groupings were often advantageous as students found themselves grouped with individuals they could identify with. Although the extent of involvement varied from one student to another, each was given the opportunity to work for his class by holding a class office, being on the cabinet or simply by giving his support in fund raising projects. Some students displayed their class pride during pep assemblies and by wearing pins and shirts bearing the year of their graduation; others felt no loyalties to their class. Through activities which involved the entire student body, the four classes merged to form a larger class; that of Tucson High.

Classes

Freshmen

The first action of the Freshman class was to elect Kelly Hilmer president. The class worked after school on the "Freshmen Hall of Fame" that placed fourth in the Spirit Week hall decorating contest. As one of their fund raising activities, the class held a hot pretzel sale. Car washes and bake sales were also successful projects.

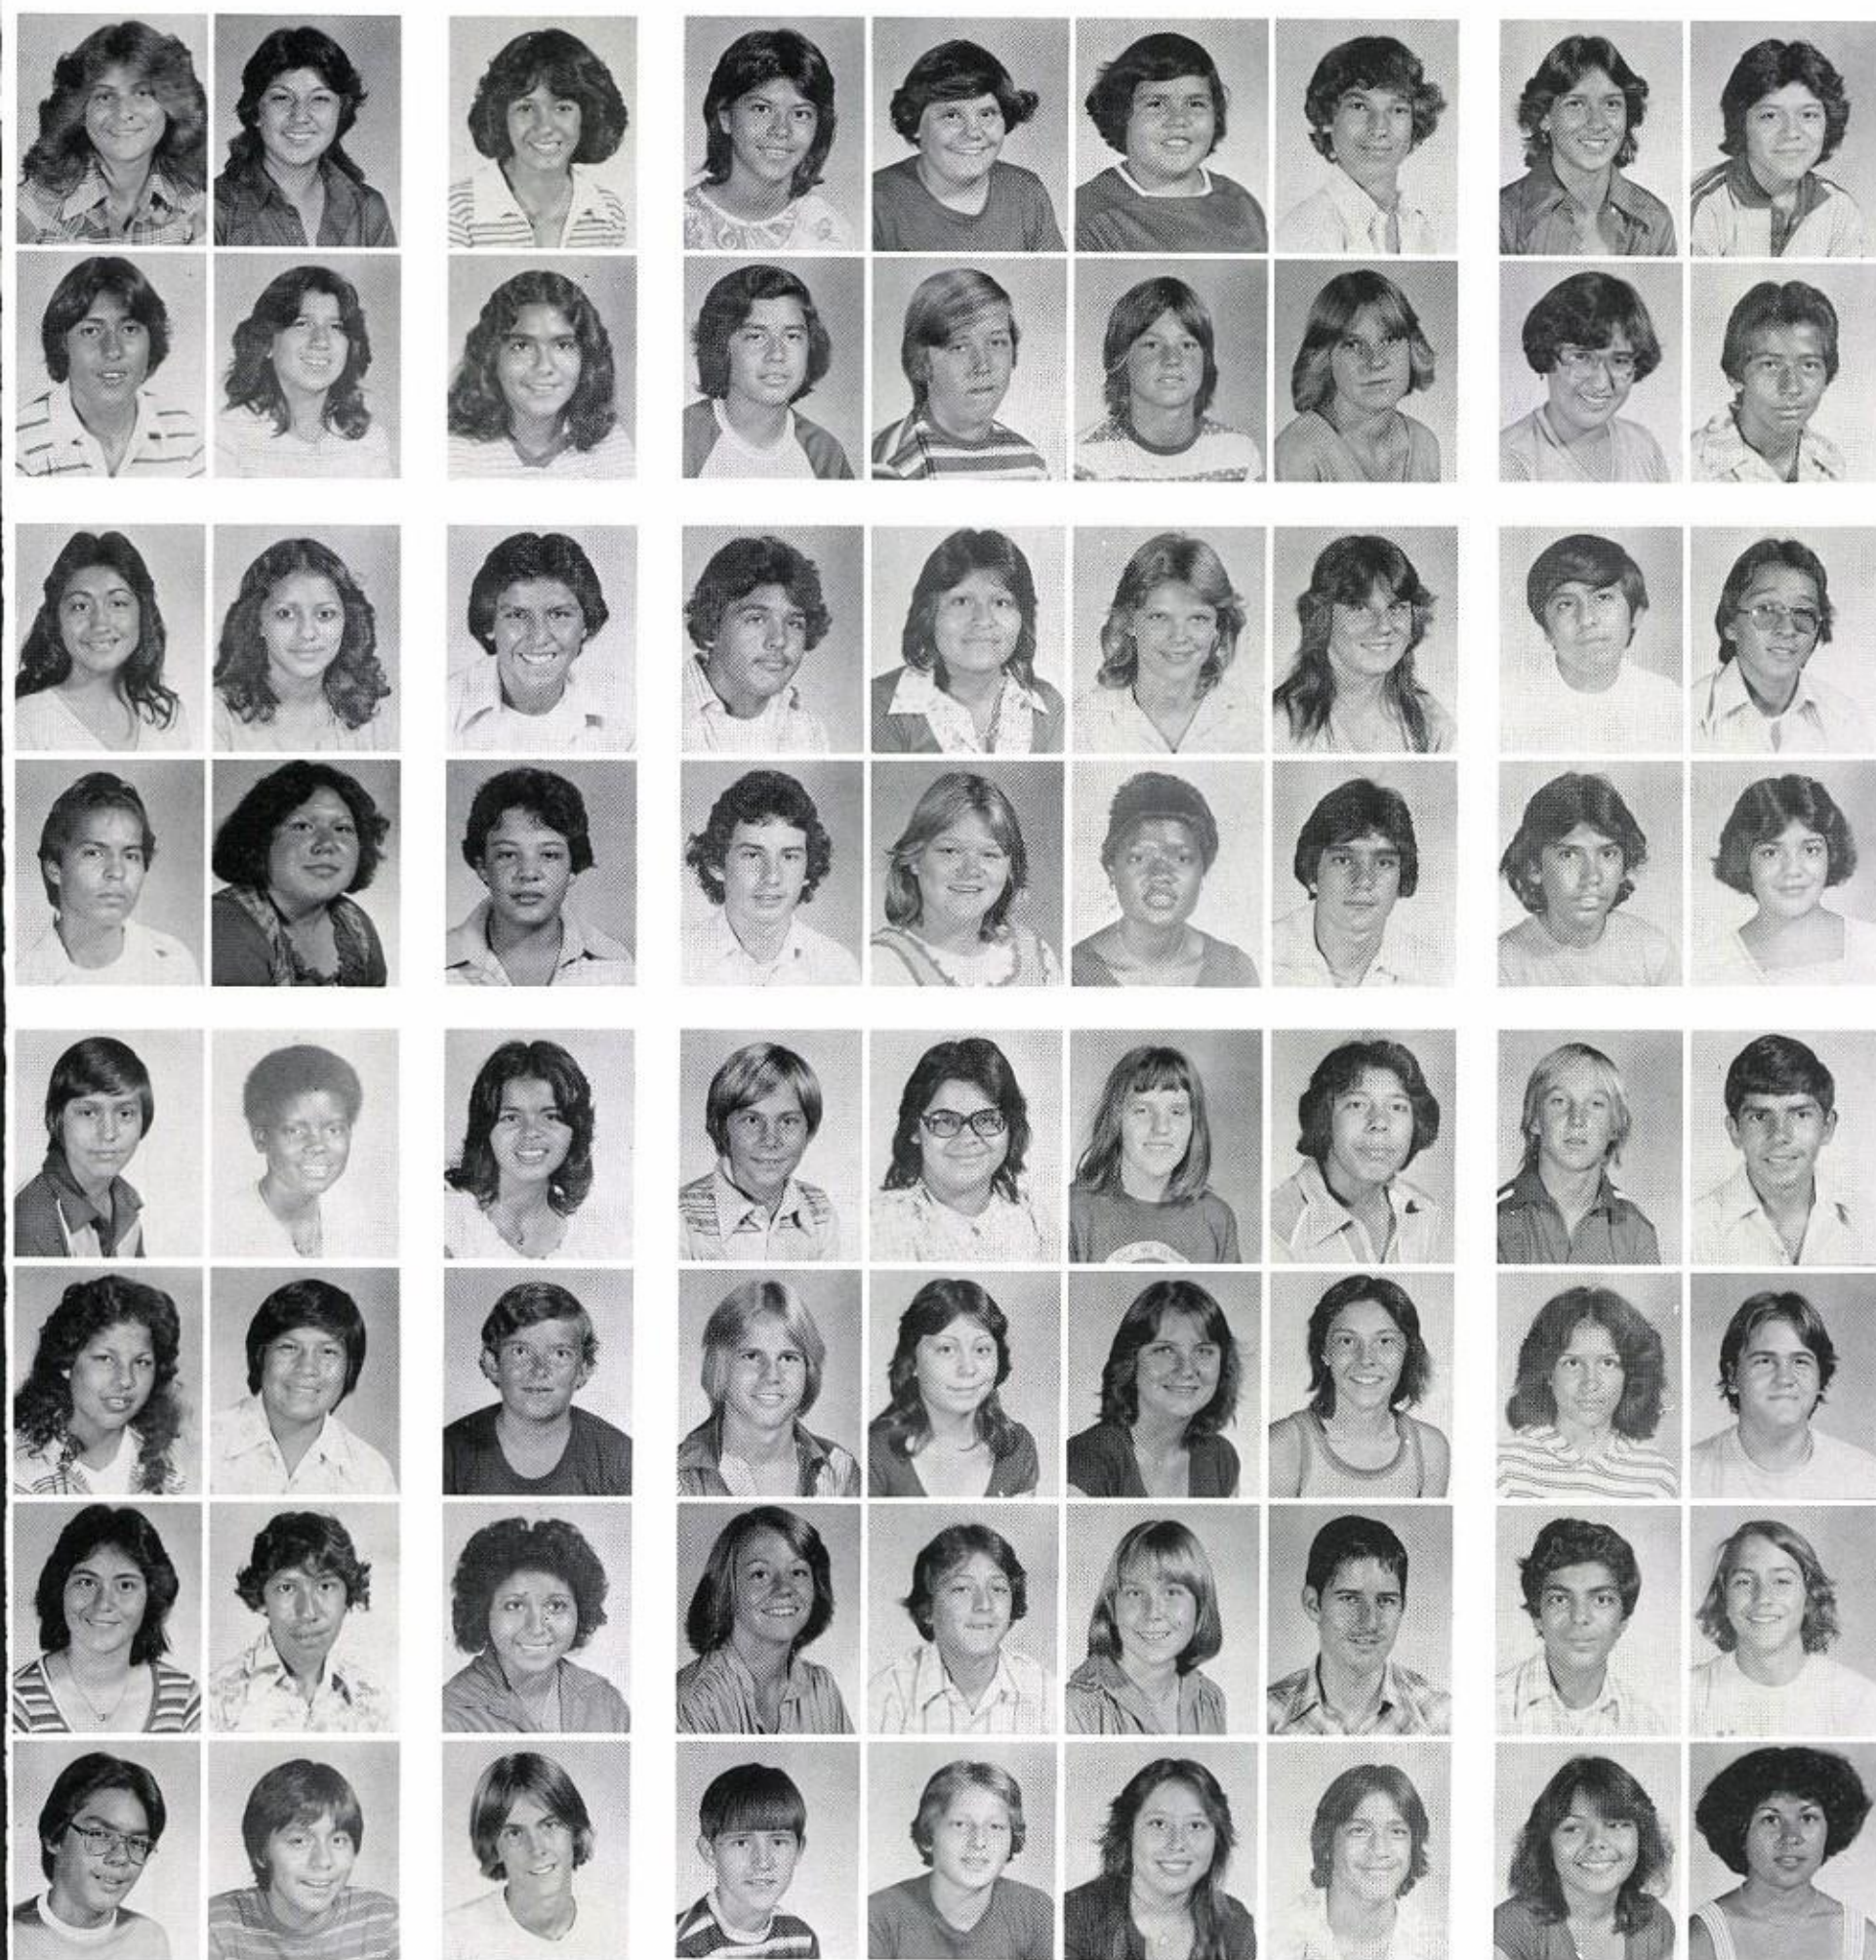

Taking a break between classes, (bottom), a student enjoyed both his friends and the warm sun.

"Follow the red brick road," was the Class of 81's theme for Spirit Week. They placed third in this event. Class members also sold popcorn balls and cotton candy during the lunch hour. Bake sales and car washes were a big part of fund raising.

Juniors

Breaking tradition, the Junior class took first place in the hall decorating contest with their theme "The Wonderful World of Badgerland." Along with car washes and balloon sales, the class of 1980 sold Christmas corsages and had an "Almost Anything Goes" week, for fund-raising activities.

The planters outside the library (top right) were a popular place for students to meet and talk throughout the day.

Pay phones located around the school (bottom left) allowed students to make off-campus calls during the day.

Seniors

The senior class sold mistletoe, Santa Grams and Valentine corsages. Along with the Homecoming festivities they organized the Tidy Bowl, which they lost to the juniors, 12-6. In addition, the seniors were responsible for the annual Junior-Senior Prom and the trip to Disneyland after graduation.

Vanessa Don and Regina Rojas debated an item (bottom right) on their inventory list in home ec.

From many events one experience.

THS students were affected by local and world-wide events.

Californian Howard Jarvis initiated a tax revolt which spread across the nation.

Pope John Paul I, successor to Pope Paul VII, died after 34 days and was quickly succeeded by John Paul II. A TUSD teacher strike occurred when teachers and school board members reached an impasse.

As San Diego was recovering from the worst crash in U.S. aviation history, a Davis-Monthan jet crashed in the university area not far from THS.

Many students took part in campaigns for the November election in which Babbitt remained governor.

Jim Jones led over 900 of his People's Temple followers to mass suicide after members killed U.S. Congressman Ryan.

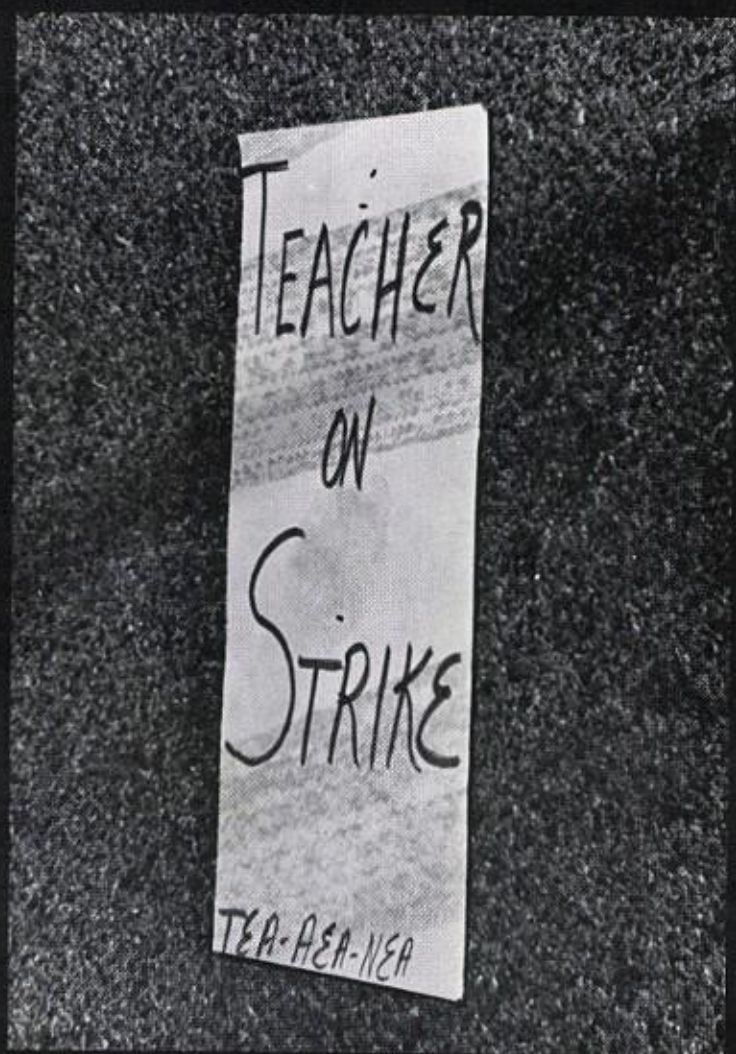

Carter recognized the communist government in China, affecting U.S. relations with Taiwan.

Record-breaking rains caused flooding, resulting in parts of the state being declared National Disaster areas.

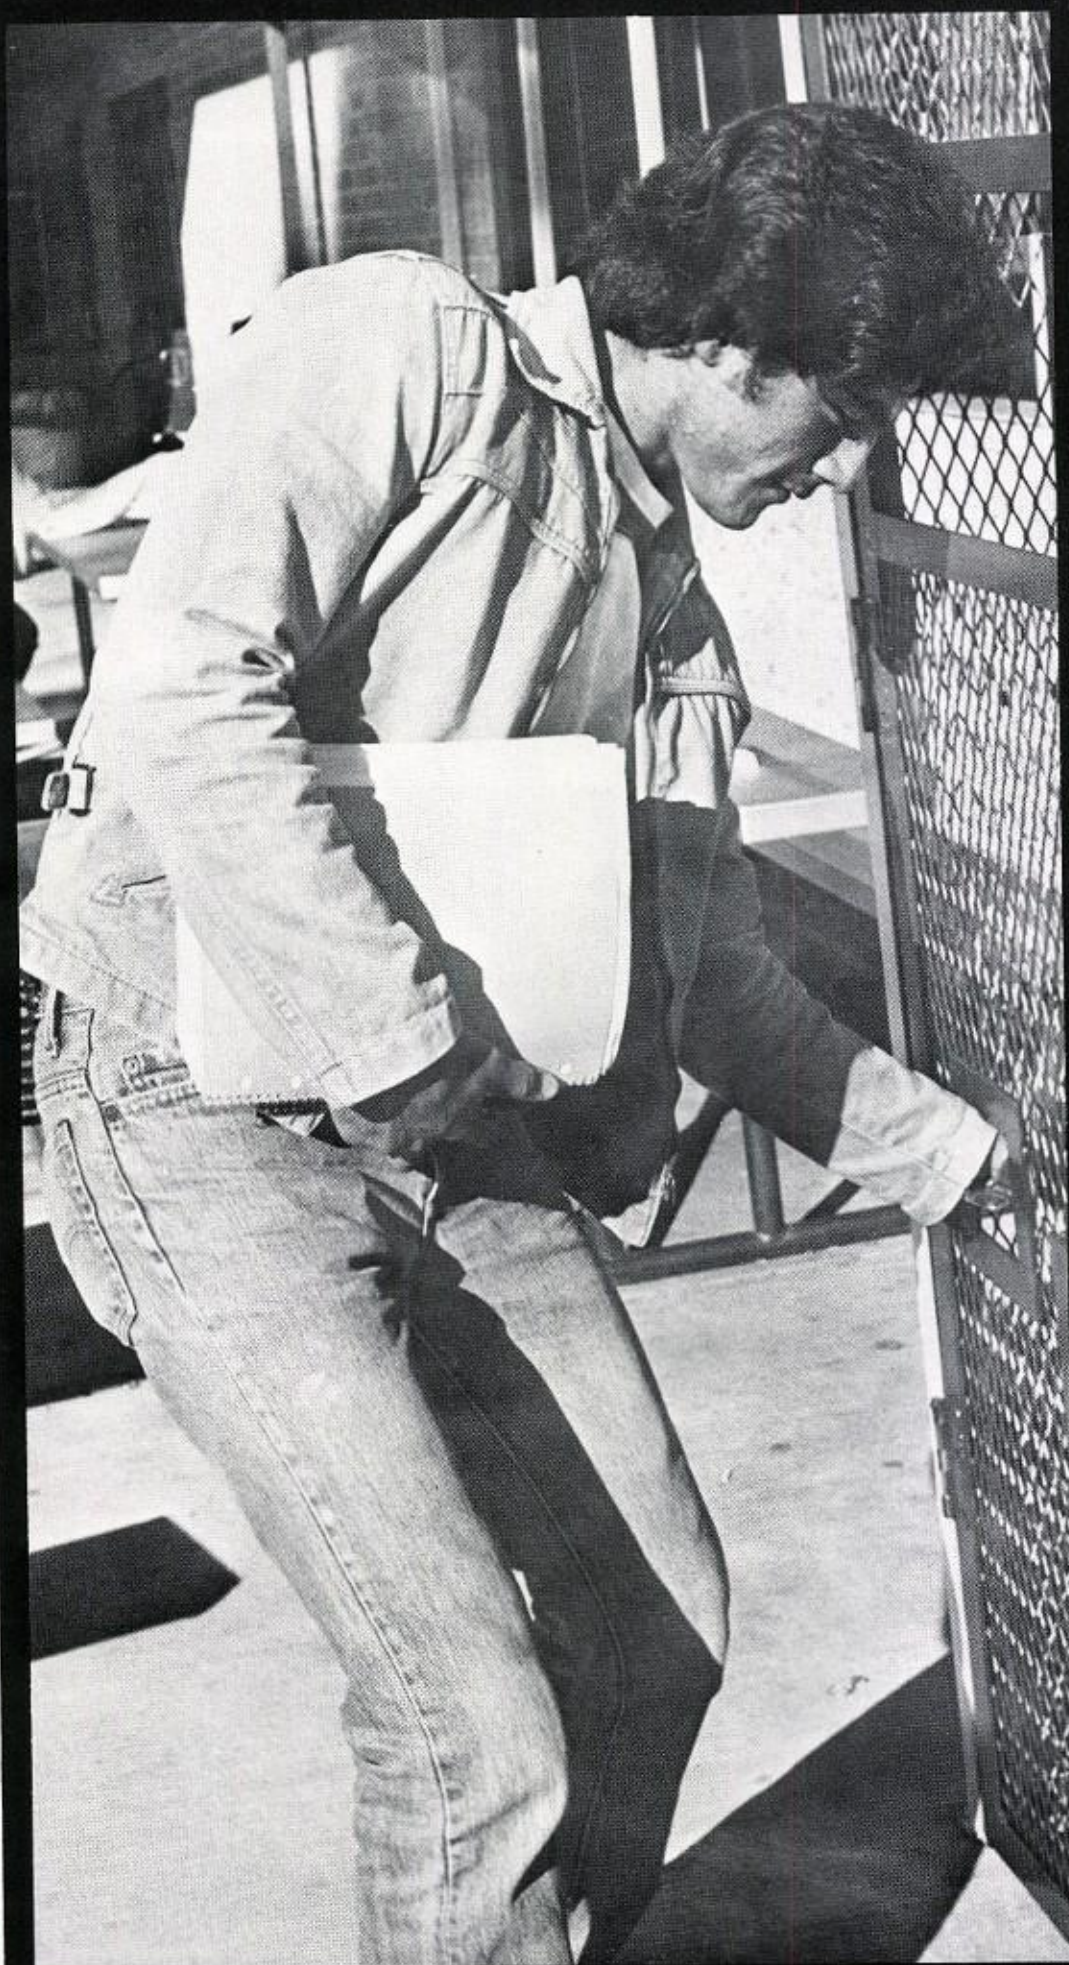

As the year progressed, students adjusted to or remained ignorant of a changing world.

Events which left students with lasting impressions began with the first football game and ended with graduation. For interested students the months in-between were filled with try-outs, club meetings and sports activities. To the disinterested students the in-between months represented routine. Their very lack of interest made their high school careers what they were: boring, useless or simply unimportant. Students placed different values on each event depending on what most directly involved them. Some students centered their activities around school, others found outside interests, while still others moved in both spheres. At THS students encountered new problems. The majority of students learned what racial prejudice and what the extremes of poverty and wealth were all about. All faced the problems coming with growing up and making their own decisions. Some had to adapt to the newness of high school, while others faced problems relating to their impending graduation. The year and all it brought was neither all good nor all bad, but through it students experienced high school at THS.
